SCHOOL STRIKE SPREADS

$100,000 BLAZE IN ROXBURY

A kettle of fat, overturned in the lunch room of Frank P. Izzo, at No. 46½ Warren street, Roxbury, early today, started a fire which swept through ten buildings in the block bounded by Ziegler, Warren and Dudley streets and Harrison avenue, including a stable, in which 120 horses were suffocated, and caused a damage estimated at $100,000.

George Engman, night watchman in the stable of H. P. Cook, which was destroyed, was probably fatally burned while attempting to rescue the horses. He is at the City Hospital.

Engman, who will probably lose his life, Owen Crehan and Justin McCarthy employed in the Roxbury sub-postoffice station, and James Copper, a waiter, were the heroes of the fire. They braved death rescuing the inmates of houses, who were asleep.

Tries to Save Horses.

Crehan and McCarthy were at work at the tube in the postoffice across the street when they saw the flames and rushed to the house. They were joined by Cooper, who is employed as a waiter in Perry's lunch room at No. 43 Warren street.

The second floor was occupied by Mrs. Mary Cuffey and Hattie Corfiled. They were awakened and carried to the street. William Fadden, his wife, Katherine, four sons, Peter, Spurgeon, Daniel and Preston, and two daughters, Grace and Mildred, lived on the top floor. They were also assisted to the street.

The rear of the lunch room adjoins the three-story brick boarding and baiting stable of H. P. Cook, which faces in Harrison avenue, and is connected with a four-story brick ell leading out into Zeigler street. The flames spread into the rear of the stable and, fed by the hay, swept from basement to roof of both buildings in a twinkling.

The three-story wooden building at Nos. 40 to 46 Warren street, on the corner of Zeigler, was the next to catch fire. Tongues of flames shot from the upper stories of the stable in Zeigler street to the roof of this building, which added to the spread of the fire and sent sparks and blazing brands shooting hundreds of feet into the air.

Help Many to Escape.

The first floor of the building was occupied as a saloon by John J. Kennedy. The second floor of No. 42 was occupied by Mrs. Mary Leary, her son Richard and H. Morehouse, a lodger. They were rescued by Crehan, McCarthy and Copper, who then went to the floor above and helped out William Cirshbaum, his wife Rose and two children, Ethel and Burton.

Mr. and Mrs. John Ward were taken out of the top floor of No. 44, the second floor of which was occupied by the dental parlors of Dr. E. H. Spencer Wright.

By this time the fire had spread in all directions and the roof of the one-story wooden building at No. 40A Warren street and occupied as a barber shop, was in flames. The barber shop separated the two three story dwellings in Warren street and aided the firemen in stopping the fire.

A dwelling house at No. 166 Dudley street was the next to fall prey to the flames. Motorman Thomas Kenney burst in the front door and ran upstairs. George Winfield, his wife and three children, Edward, Frances and Irene, were aroused in time to save most of their effects. The first floor of the building was occupied by the saloon of J. J. Kenney.

The flames also attacked the roof of the dwelling at No. 162 Dudley street, containing the barber shop of Joseph Bisognana, and a string of one-story wooden structures along Harrison avenue, occupied by the Asphalt Roofing Company, Farrell's plumbing shop and B. Tweed, painter and decorator, were endangered.

ICE FORMED ON WINNIPESAUKEE

WOLFEBORO, N. H., May 8.—Early comers to the Lake Winnipesaukee region, who went down to their boats today to try them out on the lake, found the boats frozen solid in ice one-quarter of an inch thick. A heavy frost covered the ground for several miles about the lake. It is feared great damage will result to the apple, pear and peach crops as a result of the frost.

PUBLICITY ON MISSING BANK CASH WANTED

The admission of George W. Coleman that $117,000, of which he knew nothing, was stolen from the National City Bank of Cambridge, is pointed to today by those demanding the hearing of the bank case be conducted with open doors as a striking example of the need of publicity.

"I took $183,000," said Coleman. "Somebody else got the missing $117,000."

Who?

Receiver Bates, attempting to fix responsibility for Coleman's being able to loot the bank, hopes to find out. He wants the public to know also. The depositors demand an explanation of where every cent of their money went. Meanwhile, the hearings on Receiver Bates' suit continue to be star chamber sessions.

The AMERICAN, continuing its fight to obtain the fullest publicity for the condition of affairs leading to the wreck of the bank, has wired United States Judge Aldrich, now in New Hampshire, who appointed former Judge Harris as master in the case. Judge Aldrich is appealed to to open the doors at once.

Today's hearing was conducted as have been the others, behind closed doors.

Patiently, day after day, Coleman has gone over the ledgers and pass books of the bank, picking out the individual accounts and detailing just how he managed to get away with $183,000 of depositors' money.

With all the individual accounts checked up and with Coleman admitting to taking $183,000 he persists that he took no more.

The total shortage in the bank sums up $300,000. Where has the other $117,000 gone? Who got it?

CANNON'S CARD TABLE SOLD AT $18

WASHINGTON, May 8.—The card table of former Speaker Cannon, around which many notable statesmen have met in games of chance and skill, today went under the auctioneer's hammer for $18, and the gas lamp which shed its rays upon those who sat around the board brought $1.25. The last tie that linked the veteran legislator to the National Capital has been broken, for when he left for his home in Danville, Ill., he took with him the furnishings which he desired. The remainder he left here to be sold.

WELLS IS ACCUSED BY WIFE

ST. ALBANS, Vt., May 8.—Mrs. Anna May Wells, who is charged with her husband with poisoning two of their children, today took the stand at the trial of her husband and gave the most startling testimony against him.

She declares that since she has been in jail her husband sent her paris green concealed in oranges, telling her to kill herself so that he might go free. She also said that he told her to feign insanity, and this she said she did.

The calling of Mrs. Wells came as a complete surprise, as was her testimony against her husband.

Mrs. Wells said: "While I was confined in the Franklin County Jail awaiting trial, my husband sent me eight oranges, all containing paris green. At a later date my husband sent me a tin box containing paris green in a liquid form.

Wanted Her to Slay Baby.

"He urged me to take this poison, as my death would free him of guilt. I also received three letters from him in which he urged me to feign insanity.

"In accordance with these requests I cut my hair off, tore my clothes and the books and papers in my cell and did other acts to prove to my jailers I was insane.

"I received other letters in which I was instructed to kill my baby as an evidence of insanity.

"On the day the babies are poison, Mr. Wells arose first and got his own breakfast. I prepared the family breakfast, consisting of condensed milk and bread. I watered the milk and placed it on the table in a small pitcher.

Victims the Last.

"Louis and Marie were the last two of the family to eat of the milk and bread and they ate three times as much as the others. Two hours and a half afterwards Louis and Marie were taken ill and the other children also became ill. That night Louis died. Marie died the following day. December 3, 1912."

The State, it was presumed, introduced this evidence to show that Wells had an opportunity to place poison in the milk between the time Mrs. Wells ate it and the time it was eaten by the two children who died.

The State finished its direct examination of Mrs. Wells at noon. She will be cross-examined by Attorney Warren R. Austin, counsel for the defense.

JAPAN FILES PROTEST ON ALIEN BILL

WASHINGTON, May 88.—Disdaining the customary usages of diplomatic etiquette which provide that representatives of foreign powers shall call upon the Secretary of State at his office, Viscount Chinda, Japanese ambassador, today visited Secretary Bryan at the latter's residence, and there presented to him a formal protest from Tokio against the passage of the Webb alien land laws in California.

The Secretary of State returned from California shortly before noon. Fifteen minutes after he had arrived at his uptown residence, the Japanese ambassador called and asked to see Mr. Bryan. The representatives of the Washington and Tokio governments were closeted together for more than a half an hour, and while neither would discuss the interview, it became known that the Japanese protest against the California anti-alien land bill had been filed.

Secretary Bryan promised Viscount Chinda that his objections to the bill would receive full consideration at the government and that they would be brought to the attention of the President and of the Cabinet.

The Japanese representative also was assured that everything possible would be done from Washington to prevent the enactment of any law contrary to the treaty obligations of the United States even if it were necessary to carry the matter to the Supreme Court.

FRAMINGHAM GIRL DRINKS POISON DOSE

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, May 8.—Miss Helen May Goodridge, eighteen, is dead at the Union Avenue Hospital, Framingham. She drank a quantity of rat poison to "end her miserable existence."

That was what she told her shop mates she was going to do. She had said she found it hard to make both ends meet on $5 a week. She was employed by the Dennison Manufacturing Company.

Mrs. Della Goodridge, the girl's mother, is employed in a Philadelphia hat factory and lives at 5444 Irving street, that city.

Medical Examiner Palmer of Framingham said death was due to "taking poison with suicidal intent."

In Miss Goodridge's room was found a Bible in which was written:

"Presented to Miss Helen May Goodridge by her Sunday school superintendent, Appleton B. Williams, Upton, Mass., June 14, 1908."

CLARKE IS CHAIRMAN.

WASHINGTON, May 8.—The Senate Committee on Commerce held its first meeting today and elected Senator Clarke of Arkansas chairman.

PUPILS NOW OUT IN

South Boston · Roxbury
Jamaica Plain · Brookline
Charlestown · Cambridge

The school authorities and the police of Boston and Cambridge bent every effort this afternoon to "break the backbone" of the "strike" among the pupils in the public schools. In the face of drastic orders to the police to end the strike, thousands of schoolboys were defiant today. In South Boston and Roxbury strike "demonstrations" took place. Every schoolhouse in Cambridge and many of the Boston schools were under strict police guard today.

In Cambridge the police practically read the "riot act" to the "strikers." Following a conference today between Mayor J. Edward Barry and Commissioner of Public Safety Henry J. Cunningham, the Cambridge police captains were ordered to detail at once policemen to all schools, to send plain clothes men scouting through the school districts and to adopt emergency measures in dispersing any throngs of "strike" paraders.

Three hundred boys "picketed" the front of the Dudley School in Roxbury and terrified younger children on their way to school with commands to join the "strikers." When the children tried to slip past the crowd into the school yard the smaller ones were roughly handled. Their faces were slapped and scores of the children ran home in fright.

In South Boston during the school recess hour 250 schoolboys passed through a cordon of police about the Bigelow School, which is one of the "strike" centres, and almost immediately began shouting, "We want our rights!" "Give us the shorter school day!" "We are strikers!" and giving their other "strike" yells. The boys were chased by the policemen.

More Schools Involved.

The strike spread today to Charlestown and Jamaica Plain. Two hundred boys at the Agassiz school in Jamaica Plain held a "mass meeting" in front of the school and talked "strike." When the school bell rang only a few broke away from the "ranks." The majority "stuck it out" until Principal Littlefield and Sub-Master Miller appeared. Both ordered all the boys into the school building.

The boys still proved stubborn, and the principal grabbed one lad and the submaster another and carried both inside the building. This ended the "demonstration."

One hundred boys and girls at the Bunker Hill School in Charlestown assembled outside the school during the noon recess today and did some "peaceful picketing." Later when Headmaster F. L. Keith appeared, they broke up and went back to the classrooms for the afternoon session. Fifty boys remained away from the school today.

"Strikers" Invade Brookline.

Five hundred boys paraded from Roxbury along Longwood avenue into Brookline today. Hearing them shouting, Pa-

MILLIONAIRE FOR A DAY BROKE AGAIN

WILKESBARRE, Pa., May 8.—John ("Butch") McDevitt, who leaped into fame more than a year ago by posing as "a millionaire for a day," was ousted from his pool room today because he failed to pay his rent. His stock was seized. "I am glad it happened," exclaimed McDevitt. "I am tired of business, anyway. I consider myself the most successful failure under God's dome and I am glad I am."

TRIPLETS COME AS ANSWER TO PRAYERS.

NEW YORK, May 8.—The prayers of Louis and Rebecca Isler were granted today when the stork brought them triplets. Ever since last January, when their four other children were burned to death in a fire which destroyed their home, the Islers have offered up daily prayers for more children. The triplets, all boys, and mother are doing well.

TO ARREST 8 IN MEXICAN BOMB PLOT.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 8.—Federal warrants charging that eight prominent Los Angeles men had conspired to send an aeroplane to Mexico to drop bombs into the city of Guaymas were issued today. The names of the men accused were withheld by the authorities.

"QUARANTINED," SNEERS GIRL, OF LONE STRIKER IN SCHOOL HERO POSE

Sweet land of liberty,
Of thee we sing.

One heard the dear old song, this morning, wafted on the sweet breezes of May from out the open windows of the Shepard school, in Massachusetts avenue, North Cambridge. O, the dear memories of childhood!

A small boy was standing at the corner of Russell street. He was all that was left of the one-day strike for shorter hours in the people's schoolhouses.

"Bunk," he said.

From ev-ev-ry mountain side
Let freedom ring!

"More bunk!" said the veteran striker, "more bunk, and the poor boobs fall for it."

Whereupon the young gentleman was interviewed.

"But you don't get my name," he said to the war correspondents. "You got General 'Jimmy' Glynn's name and what the newspapers didn't do to 'Glynny' was a caution.

"Yes," said the reporters, getting their notebooks out, "go on."

"Wilson Done It."

"Well, if you want to know what I think of the busting of the strike of the book-slaves of North Cambridge you can say that Woodrow Wilson did it! And maybe we won't take it out of the Democratic party!

"The fellows were putting in too many hours at school, that's all there is to that, and they went about it, in a law-abiding way, to call attention to the fact. Nobody hooked it from school, and nobody was going to. We did get up a monster street demonstration, to call attention to the fact that we were being ground down, but all we wanted to do was to advertise.

"The next step would have been to get our parents busy. Then we would have gone to the School Committee. We would have got the Single Session and everybody would be happy.

"Instead of which, what? I'LL tell you:

"Old Buck," the head master at the Ellis school, tips Superintendent Fitzgerald; 'Fitz' tips Mayor Barry, who 'just happened' to be in Washington; Barry goes up to the White House and puts the poisen into Woodrow; Woodrow gets on the telegraph line and sends a rush order to 'Jimmy' Glynn's dad, one of the bosses at the Watertown Arsenal.

"Get me?

"Fellows, we were up against the whole United States government, and we had a fat chance! We'd a whipped 'em, at that, if it hadn't been for the cops. It beats fun how every time the Oppressed rise up and tries to throw off the Shackles, how the cops take the side of the oppressor"

"And now what are you going to do?" All that is Left of the Strike was asked.

Diogenes' Daughter.

"Who? Me? I'm going to stick if I have to stick alone!"

Spoken like a man; but just then up came a gabby young person of maybe twelve. She must have been a daughter of Mr. Opper's "Diogenes."

"What's HE telling you?" she asked the war correspondents, "is HE claiming that HE was in the strike. It's an awful fib. He's got sickness at home, and they won't LET him go to school!"

"You tell those fellows what my name is," said the boy, now in the middle of the avenue, "and I'll catch your young brother 'after' and beat seven kinds of tar out of him."

And that seemed, at an early hour today, to be about all that was left of the great Cambridge strike of schoolboys for Shorter Hours. What the boys wanted was a single session. What they got may be imagined. What they are going to get is past finding out.

"Jimmy" Glynn blames the Press—which seems inevitably to come in for censure from both sides in every uprising—and, like every other man who has been caught at it, from the day of Father Adam, also blames Woman.

"The con-founded girls are to blame for the whole thing," James said today, "they told the reporters I was the Strike Leader!

"Strike leader!" (with great disgust) "Strike nothing! Maybe my Ma didn't give me 'strike leader!' And Pa!

"After we had had our parade, the reporters came up in droves, and the crazy girls had to go and give the fellows' names, and their own names, too. Now we're in Dutch for the rest of the term. We hear that some of us may not be promoted. Some of them tell me that I am even booked for the Reformatory."

The reporters tried to assure "Jim" that there was nothing whatever in that awful threat, but poor "Jim" would not be consoled and off he went, sobbing.

For Age-Marred Skins and Dull, Streaky Hair

(From American Press.)

Fine lines and that aged condition of the skin are caused by pore-clogging powders and creams. These should be discarded for a spurmax-lotion, which seems a part of the skin when on, and is easily made at home at little cost by dissolving 4 ounces spurmax in ½ pint witch hazel (or hot water), then adding 2 teaspoonfuls of glycerine. This face-lotion protects the skin against the ravages of sun and wind, removes tan, freckles, oiliness and other upsets, and lends an indefinable charm to the complexion.

An invigorating and pleasing shampoo can easily be made by dissolving a teaspoonful canthrox in a cup of hot water. This creates an abundance of rich, cleansing lather, which is a positive benefit to your scalp and hair. After rinsing, your hair will dry quickly and evenly, with a brilliance and silky softness truly charming. Canthrox, which costs little at the druggist's, removes dandruff, makes the scalp healthy and promotes an abundant growth.

HALE 25 BOYS TO COURT FOR STRIKE RIOTS

trolman James McDonald of the Brookline police hurried up and charged on the youngsters, who were completely routed. The chase lasted a quarter of a mile to the the Boston line.

Fifty boys created disorder outside the Comins School at Roxbury Crossing today. They were dispersed by a policeman.

The school officials took steps toward giving the police assistance in trying to handle the "strike" crowds of schoolboys. Near the schools the principals, teachers and sub-masters watched for attempts to organize a concerted movement at rowdyism. Superintendent of Boston Schools Franklin B. Dyer called on the parents of the children to do their part.

Home Discipline Helpful.

The police rounded up scores of the "strikers" and "strike sympathizers" who tried to help the "cause" by "playing hookey." Scores of recalcitrant youngsters were literally dragged to school by their fathers or mothers, some by the nape of the neck, some by the arm. According to the school authorities the sight of these boys in the hands of their parents was the best "medicine" possible with which to "break the strike."

In every school so far affected by the "strike" red eyes today told the story of the adoption of extreme measures by fathers and mothers. In some cases it was the hair brush, in others the time honored slipper, or the shaving strop or almost whatever seemed best fitted for the purpose.

The police also had a busy time of it today summonsing boys to court who have been recognized as paraders or having been among the "strikers" who hurled sticks, stones and other missiles at schools in East Cambridge, Roxbury and South Boston. The police urged that "making an example" of some of the disturbers with the aid of parents would prove effectual in "bottling up" the strike right on the start.

Hundreds of pupils remained away from school today, some of them perhaps on account of sickness, but probably the majority because of "strike" sympathies. Twenty boys were absent from the Sherwin School, Roxbury. In this school thirty panes of glass were broken in the first "strike riots." Similar numbers of absentees were reported from other schools.

Dyer Issues Statement.

Superintendent Dyer of Boston schools issued this statement:

> Attendance and conditions in the schools this morning throughout the city are practically normal. Much of the disturbance last night was created by outsiders. I have had a conference with the chairman of the School Committee and with the various principals this morning concerning the disturbance in South Boston and Roxbury yesterday among the school children, and directions have been issuel to teachers to enforce regular attendance.
>
> It appears that the vigorous measures at home have succeeded in quelling whatever disturbance occurred. It is absolutely necessary that the homes throughout the city should arise to their responsibility in the control of their children. It goes without saying that the school authorities will maintain descipline in and about the schools during school hours. We realize that this movement came suddenly and without warning and we feel certain that an appeal to the homes is all that will be necessary to secure their active support. We know that the parents of this city stand for law and order and will act with the schools in securing it and supplement their work before and after hours.

Ill-Considered Movement.

> We especially request the editors of the Boston newspapers to see that reports of disturbances are not magnified nor made spectacular. The trouble thus far has not been at all general nor it is likely to be. The influence of our press is such that a stand taken by it against lawlessness will meet with general response.
>
> Masters and teachers have the full and complete support of the school authorities in maintaining discipline and order. The episode is but an ill-considered movement on the part of children who have not reached the age of discretion.

Two hundred and fifty boys made things hum for a few minutes in the street outside the Bigelow School in South Boston today. Theirs was "strike" talk. The little chaps looked belligerent, gossiping in groups of the "rioters" and their vandal work in smashing windows of various school buildings and laughing as they pointed at the broken lights in the windows of this school. But the appearance of the police shortly before the school gate opened put a quietus on all the boyish bravado. At sight of the policemen sent to guard the school the lads became as meek as lambs and shortly after they were flocking into school as humbly as sheep into a pen.

At the Norcross Girls' School in South Boston the 400 pupils gathered shortly after 8 o'clock today. There were no "pickets" in evidence, and the girls even denied that they were even "strike sympathizers." They went further and said there wasn't a "militant" in the whole school.

In front of the school building a throng of fathers, mothers and spectators had gathered, but all that was left for them to see was the score or more of broken window panes which told the mute story of the very audible "riot" of the schoolboys.

Patrolman John J. Reilly of Station 6 was detailed for duty at the Norcross school. He stuck to his post from the early hours until after the last girl had filed into the school doors.

EDNA POWERS of the Ellis School, North Cambridge, reported active in the strike for one-session day.

CARMEN WIN SETTLEMENT FROM MAY 1

The conferences which have been in progress for some weeks between the directors of the Elevated company and a committee representing the 8,200 employes of the road, with a view to the readjustment of the scales of wages, have reached one important result in the interest of the employes.

This is that whatever be the final settlement, or when it is made, it shall date frrm May 1. This ensures that the employes will suffer no loss by delay in reaching the end of the negotiations.

As another result of those conferences, a provisional report has been prepared. It covers twenty-three typewritten pages.

This report is being considered simultaneously by the company's officials and the representatives of the Street Carmen's Unin. One batch of the men met this morning, another will meet at 8 this evening and still another section of the employes will hold a meeting after midnight.

These different meetings are made necessary by the "split-up" hours of the employes.

In the conferences the union is represented by Fred Fay, general organizer; Attorney James H. Vahey, President Matthew J. Higgins and Business Agent M. J. Neisdale, George M. Mulvey and George O'Rourke.

The company's representatives are: J. L. Richards, executive director; Vice-President Charles S. Sargent, Attorney Frederick E. Snow and Henry L. Neal.

Today's Beauty Recipe
By Mme. D'Mille

"A simple and reliable remedy for skin eruptions, chaps, cold sores, pimples and eczema is Mother's Salve. It is healing, cooling, soothing and antiseptic in action. It should be in every family medicine cabinet.

"Just worrying about hair falling out won't help any woman. A few minutes' work is better than hours of worry. Faded and brittle hair, falling hair and baldness are caused by a parasite that destroys the life of the hair. Mother's Shampoo removes these parasites, leaves the scalp healthy and clean and makes the hair fine and fluffy. Enough for several months can be bought at any drug store for 25c.

"Spotted, sallow and muddy looking complexions, together with skin eruptions often present in the spring, require a cleansing treatment instead of face powder. An ideal complexion beautifier is easily made at home by dissolving an original package of mayatone in a half pint of witch hazel. It makes the skin soft, fair and lovely.

"To remove superfluous hair on face or forearms make a paste with a little water and powdered delatone, cover the hairs for two minutes, then remove and wash the skin. Delatone does not discolor the skin and is safe and sure."—Advertisement.

MILITANTS IN PLOT TO BLOW UP PARLIAMENT

LONDON, May 8.—At the trial of Mrs. Flora Drummond, militant suffragette leaders, today, conducted by Archibald Bodkin of the Treasury Department, the prosecutor brought out that the militants were conspiring to gain entrance to the House of Lords by accepting positions as typists and clerks on the clerical staff.

Their purpose was either to interrupt the proceedings or blow up Parliament Building, he said.

The trial had not been underway very long before Mrs. Drummond, known as General Drummond for her militant propensities, collapsed in the dock. She has been in jail for a week and has refused to eat, consequently she was very weak.

Mrs. Drummond was removed from the dock in a serious condition and shortly afterwards the case was adjourned until Tuesday. All the prisoners were admitted to bail.

A bomb with lighted fuse and two detonators attached was found today in Tottenham, a suburb of London. It was discovered just in time to prevent a disastrous explosion.

Miss Mae Scott-Troy, an American suffragette, whose home is in San Francisco, has forwarded a cablegram to Andrew Carnegie asking him what right he has to pose as an American citizen when the official voting list furnished her by the sheriff of the county of Sutherland, Scotland, shows that he is voter 2, registered in the parish of Dornoch. The voting list describes Mr. Carnegie as a gentleman whose place of abode is Skibo Castle.

ALICE THAW'S FIRST HUSBAND TO RE-WED

LONDON, May 8.—The Marquis of Hertford, known as the dancing earl, is engaged to the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mosscockle of No. 26 Hertford street, Mayfair, and Clewer Park, Berkshire. In 1903, as the Earl of Yarmouth, he was married to Alice Cornelia Thaw, daughter of the late William Thaw of Pittsburgh. The marriage was dissolved in 1908.

ELAINE FRANCIS, Boston actress, who says she still loves Argentina naval man whom she is suing.

Miss Delia Dana, Granddaughter of Longfellow, to Wed

The engagement is announced of Miss Delia F. Dana of Brattle street, Cambridge, and Robert H. Hutchinson, Harvard '10, of New York city. The wedding will take place the last week of June.

Miss Dana is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Dana of Brattle street, Cambridge, and a granddaughter of the poet Longfellow. She is a sister of Edmund Trowbridge Dana, whose marriage to Miss Jessie Holliday, an English artist and subsequent experiences as vegetarian and motorman attracted considerable attention.

DAY TOO SHORT; STEEL MEN STRIKE

GARY, Ind., May 8.— One hundred laborers today refused to begin work on a new construction project for the United Steel Corporation here unless the company acceded to a demand that their hours be lengthened. The men were hired at 10½ cents per hour. The company's day calls for ten hours. The men demanded either an increase of wages or a chance to work twelve hours per day.

HARRIMAN FAILS OF NOMINATION

LOS ANGELES, May 8.—Complete returns from the primary elections here show that fifteen Socialists qualified for places on the city ticket for the election on June 3. Job Harriman, Socialist candidate for Mayor, failed to win a nomination by 784 votes. The fight between now and election day will be waged between the Socialist and anti-Socialist forces.

STILL LOVES HER FOREIGN NAVAL HERO

Miss Elaine Francis, the nineteen-year-old Boston girl who declares that she will sue Surgeon-General Jose Gorrochatequi of the Argentine navy, today said that she stills loves the young foreigner. She said:

I still love Jose and have only the kindliest feelings for him, but I think his chum should answer for the way he has treated me. If it hadn't been for Jose's chum we would still be good friends.

I have just come from New York to consult my counsel, Attorney William R. Scharton. My plan of action shall depend upon my counsel's advice.

I first met Dr. Goriochatequi last September. A mutual friend introduced us. He gave me many presents and attentions. Among other things he gave me a costly ring with a rare pearl, but he took it back.

He had been in Boton about two years supervising the surgical equipment being installed in the big battleship under construction for the Argentine Republic at the Fore River plant in Quincy.

Jose is surgeon-general in the Argentine navy and he is the bravest kind of a naval man.

He had apartments on Boylston street. Rather than to bother disposing of the furnishings which were costly, he directed that they be given to me, but when I returned from New York the furnishings had disappeared.

Miss Francis is a native of Boston. She was born in the West End. "Elaine Francis" is her stage name. She has been on the stage since she was fifteen. She is a pretty blonde. She is stopping at a Back Bay hotel.

CHILEANS PLAN SIX NEW SHIPS FOR CANAL TRADE

WASHINGTON, May 8.—R. H. de Ferrari, president of the South American Steamship Company, a Chilean corporation operating between ports in that country and Panama, has arrived in the United States to arrange for the construction for his company of six large vessels to ply between Valparaiso and New York by way of the Panama Canal.

No country in South America, it is said, is looking forward to so great an increase in trade with this country as Chile.

MAMMA LOSES "M" AND WHISKEY "E"

CHICAGO, May 8.—By decrees of the university council of Northwestern University, after July 1 simplified spellers will spell mamma with one "m," whiskey with no "e" and plough, plain plow. Rime for rhyme, the removal of cough from hiccough, making it hiccup, are other changes. The "ue" has been lost from catalog, prolog and pedagog. The final "te" has been deemed superfluous in coquet, epaulet and quintet.

MRS. LONGSTREET LOSES POSTOFFICE

WASHINGTON, May 8.—Mrs. Helen Longstreet, widow of the famous Confederate general, has lost her job. Mrs. H. W. J. Ham, her rival for the position of postmaster of Gainesville, Ga., has been appointed by President Wilson, following allegations that Mrs. Longstreet's postoffice was poorly managed.

KISSING WILL BE LOST ART IN 2015, SAYS WOMAN WRITER

WASHINGTON, May 8.—These things will come to pass in the year 2013, according to the drama written by Mrs. Christian Hemmick, a suffragist, who will produce the play here this month for the benefit of the suffrage cause:

Skirts will be discarded; both sexes will wear Oriental trousers; kissing will be unknown—except in histories. A rule compelling individual health certificates for all matrimonially inclined couples will be in force.

Mrs. Wilcox Struck by Magnificence of British Court

LONDON, May 8.—Mrs. Ella Wheeler Wilcox, the noted American authoress, declared after her presentation to the King and Queen, that she was greatly impressed by the splendor and elegance of the English court, and particularly the great preponderance of young and beautiful women there.

Among other Americans who were presented at Buckingham Palace, were Adrian Iselin and Miss Louise Iselin, Mrs. Charles Edward Greenough, and Miss Helen Marie Stuart, all of New York.

ALFONSO VISITS APARTMENTS THAT NAPOLEON HAD

PARIS, May 8.—King Alfonso of Spain and President Poincare, accompanied by a brilliant suite, went to Fontainebleau today where they witnessed manoeuvres of the Seventh and Thirteenth Dragoons and target practice by the Thirty-second Mounted and Thirtieth Artillery. These troops compose the flower of the French army.

Afterward the Spanish King was conducted to the apartments in the palace once occupied by Napoleon and was much impressed as he viewed the articles once touched by the hand of the conqueror. Luncheon was served in the Henri II. gallery.

BRANDEIS SAYS MELLEN RULE IS NEAR END

WASHINGTON, May 8.—The New Haven railroad as an aristocracy in the New England traffic business has run its course, according to Louis D. Brandeis, special government investigator, commenting on the statement of President Mellen and on the recent disclosures in the investigation of the road by Commissioner Prouty of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

"The New Haven for years has had the same standing in New England that the Bank of England has in Great Britain," said Mr. Brandeis. "Monopoly now has run its course, however, after ten years of frenzied finance on the part of the line's heads. The New Haven was without opposition in New England and consequently received all the traffic. Opportunity for investment was limited to the New Haven road, but New Englanders do not care to put all their eggs in one basket. President Mellen should have foreseen the outcome."

Prouty to Take Care of Holders of B. & M. Stock

WASHINGTON, May 8.—Interstate Commerce Commissioner Prouty, when asked today if by recent remarks he intended to convey the impression that he believed Boston & Maine should be permitted to raise its rates, said that he did not intend to make such a statement. He explained:

"As far as the rates are concerned it is too early to determine that issue. I do not advocate an increase in the Boston & Maine rates.

"As the New England member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, I may say that I shall do all I can to protect the interests of the good people of New England who hold this stock, many of whom have depended upon the dividends from their shares to meet their living expenses."

TWENTY MILLION QUARTS OF DELAWARE STRAWBERRIES

MILFORD, Del., May 8.—Strawberry growers in Sussex County are now predicting that the early strawberry crop will be ready for shipment beginning May 10. This is the earliest that strawberries have been shipped off the Delaware peninsula for years. The berrymen claim that not less than 20,000,000 quarts of strawberries will be shipped from the peninsula this year.

PASSENGER RECORD FOR AEROPLANES

CHARTRES, France, May 8.—A world's record for passenger-carrying aeroplane flights was established here today when Frangeois, a French aviator, made a 75-minute flight with six passengers.

3-Year-Old Boy Burned to Death in Charlestown

Joseph Galwina, aged three, of No. 1 Beach street place, Charlestown, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Galwina, was burned to death while playing with matches today. His mother had left the tiny lad alone in the house while she went to make a brief call on a neighbor.

Little Joseph in her absence opened the door of a bedroom and obtained several matches, which he proceeded to light. He set fire to the mattress and bed clothing. Two men passing saw smoke pouring from the window and ran upstairs. The boy died before they reached the street, carrying him unconscious in their arms.

Would you eat dried beef in preference to a juicy steak?

No! You would take the steak! The man who wants a sweet, cool, fragrant smoke, prefers plug tobacco to sliced or granulated tobacco, because plug tobacco has more flavor and fragrance.

The real tobacco flavor depends upon the natural moisture in the leaf. The only way to preserve all this flavor is to press the leaves into plug form and keep the moisture in by covering it with a natural leaf wrapper.

Tin cans, cloth bags or waxed paper packages do not keep in all the moisture of granulated tobacco. Some of the flavor departs when the moisture evaporates. The drier tobacco is the hotter it smokes—the more it bites your tongue.

With Master Workman Plug you can cut a fresh pipeful whenever you smoke and everytime will find it the freshest—sweetest—smoothest—coolest tobacco you ever stuffed into a pipe. Try it today and convince yourself. You'll say Master Workman makes a sweet pipe sweeter.

"Light Strike" in Worcester Opened by Business Men

WORCESTER, May 8.—Henceforth, until the city government consents to light the main streets of this town in what the merchants term a fitting manner, Worcester will be the city of darkness.

Not an electric sign advertising beer or beef, not a shop window, not an arc light owned by any shop in the business centre of the city will be lighted until the city officials answer the petition of the business men.

The first night of darkness has been called a success. As the result of a meeting of the merchants late in the afternoon, the commercial lights of the city were extinguished at 8 o'clock, and not a glimmer, except from the municipal arcs, which are several hundred yards apart, showed itself. Citizens had hard work finding their way home.

SCHWAB FORMING BIG PLANS FOR FORE RIVER SHIPBUILDING PLANT

Charles M. Schwab, president of the Bethlehem Steel Company, and recently instrumental in the acquisition of the controlling interest in the Fore River Ship and Engine Company at Quincy, has just returned to Bethlehem, Pa. He had spent two days in looking over his new holdings at Quincy, and expressed himself as much pleased with the outlook when seen by an AMERICAN reporter at the Copley-Plaza just before his departure from the city.

Mr. Schwab talked affably when questioned with regard to his plans and views of things in general. When asked what he intended to do with the Fore River Plant, which he now controls, he replied:

"Oh, I don't know just what policy will be actually entered upon yet; at least my mind is not wholly made up as to the immediate situation. When I get back to Bethlehem and have time to think I shall evolve a plan that will certainly be in keeping with my past policy of going ahead. You know," he added with a merry twinkle in his steel gray eyes; "no one ever knew me to go backwards, I guess. I'll be back here next week with something up my sleeve, for by that time I will have outlined some forward plan involving both the Bethlehem works and the Fore River property. We never stand still in our business, you know!"

"How does the tariff revision under the new administration appeal to you?" he was asked. He answered:

"I have always been of the opinion that on the question of the tariff too much care could not be taken, as any violent change is bound to affect the industries of the country radically. Now, in my line for instance, I firmly believe that the proposed change is bound to have a bad effect on the manufacture of steel in this country, especially on the Atlantic coast. One in business like myself cannot but be conservative on the tariff question. My advice is for Wilson to go slow."

When asked about the strike of the 100 machine-riveters at the Fore River plant, Mr. Schwab gave a careless laugh and said:

"Don't ask me; I don't know anything about such things. I guess you'll have to talk with Admiral Bowles. He can tell you all about the conditions at Fore River."

"How about the possibility of war with Japan?"

"Really," he laughed, "I don't know anything about that either. Guess I am rather a poor reader, as I haven't read enough about it even to have an opinion in the matter. You see," he added, "I'm something of a specialist in my particular line, and I have to pay pretty strict attention to business in order to keep posted. I have very little time to take an interest in all these big subjects."

"What do you think of women suffrage—equal rights?"

"Now you've got me again. That's another subject that is too big for me to discuss; in fact, I don't know anything about the whole question."

When asked if he was a "Progressive" Mr. Schwab said that he was not. "I am an old line Republican without any fixins."

Labor Not Getting Enough.

On the subject of labor Mr. Schwab said:

"I don't think labor is getting enough, except in a few highly organized industries—the railroads, for instance. There, I believe, capital is entitled to more of a show than it is getting—especially in Massachusetts! Why, if I was hampered and hedged about like Mellen in running my railroad, I would be only too glad to sell out at any sacrifice.

"Capital, in order to be active, must not be too restricted. But here in Massachusetts you are simply running the railroad business into the ground. But I firmly believe that in many instances labor is too poorly paid. Labor isn't getting all it is entitled to, as a general thing."

"What is your opinion with regard to Socialism, Mr. Schwab?"

"That's another big question. What do you mean by Socialism?"

With it defined "as the collective ownership and democratic management of the principal means of production and distribution, government ownership and management similar to the postoffice system," Mr. Schwab answered.

"No, it never would work out into efficient operation. In order to get expansion you must have freedom of initiative and great rewards for big men. Now, no government could pay me what Mr. Carnegie did for managing the steel works there at Bethelehem. Why, do you know, I pay my manager there today more than three times as much money as the people pay the President of the United States!

"The government couldn't get the best men under those conditions. They would all go somewhere else, where they could get what they were worth. No, it never would work. Take myself, for instance, what do you suppose made me climb to where I am? It was great desire for profit; call it selfishness if you care to, but that's the truth.

Steel Business Too Big.

"Now I never would have got as high as I am under Socialism, not on your life. Why the government couldn't afford to pay me what I am worth to someone else, or to myself. If the government turned Socialist and the people wanted to own the steel business, I would get out of it in a minute, at any loss, and go into agriculture or something else where there was some chance for a man to make a dollar on his own merits. No Socialism for me! It wouldn't be efficient!"

"But J. P. Morgan said that he liked combination and co-operation better than competition! What have you to say to that?"

"Nonsense! the steel business is already too big now. It is unwieldy and incapable of further expansion. It is too big to develop much more than it is!

"Furthermore, it is a mistake to say that 'all men are equal,'—I don't think they are——," but but just then the telephone operator anounced a long-distance call, and the interview was at an end.

When Mr. Schwab returned from the booth, a friend was waiting for him; and, indicating the reporter, he said with a merry laugh, "Mr. Carpenter, we've been talking Socialism. Had quite an interesting chat, didn't we?"—turning to shake hands heartily as he left.

"And now, Mr. Carpenter, we'll go and inspect that new warehouse—if I've got time before my train leaves. My automobile is at the door. Come and see me again, Mr. R porter, won't you?" and Mr. Schwab was gone.

SIGNATURES TORN OFF, WILL IS VOID

PRPVIDENCE, May 8.—Hereafter any Providence person wishing to revoke a will may make it void simply by tearing off the signature, according to a decision by Judge Stone in the Municipal Court.

The will of Henry Watkins was submitted for probate with the signatures torn off and pinned on again. Evidence showed Mr. Watkins had torn off the signatures to revoke the will. Judge Stone denied the petition to probate the will.

Worcester Police Hunt Man Who Has Threatened Girl

WORCESTER, May 8.—The police searched the foreign quarters here today for a man answering a description of the person who delivered a letter at the home of Rev. John A. Eckstrom, on Laurel street, in which threats were made against the clergyman's seven-year-old daughter, Hildur. Rev. Mr. Eckstrom is pastor of the Gethesmane Swedish Lutheran Church.

According to Miss Edith Paulson, a visitor at the clergyman's home, the letter, which was the first of two notes, was brought to the Eckstrom home last Friday night. Miss Paulson said Mrs. Eckstrom thought the letter a practical joke until the second note was received.

HAVERHILL DRUG STORE ROBBED

HAVERHILL, May 8.—Thieves, believed to be part of an amateur gang of yeggs, early today robbed the Hall & Lyons drug store in Railroad square of $115. Entrance was secured through a side window. Safe and tills were rifled. The robbers left no clews. Numerous robberies of like nature have taken place in nearby localities.

MAY TELL HUB SUFFRAGISTS OF HUNGER STRIKE

Boston and Massachusetts women suffragists are keenly interested in Miss Elsie McKenzie, "the suffragette without a country," now on her way to Toronto, to return to England.

She may be invited to Boston to tell local suffragists some of her experiences in the English suffragette campaign.

Miss McKenzie was one of the first to go on "the hunger strike" in Holloway Jail. With this prison record against her, she may be prevented from landing on English soil.

In that case she would not be allowed to return to America. She would then become the enforced guest of a steamship company and would be a problem to dispose of.

This noted suffragette has been visiting Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont and other suffrage leaders in New York. She intends to spend some weeks in Toronto. She hopes to come to Boston during that time.

Miss McKenzie said, "I shall return to England by way of Canada, spending several weeks in Toronto.

"The English authorities may not allow me to land since I have a prison record and if they do not I shall probably not be allowed to return to America.

"The prospect of spending the remainder of my days on the high seas at the expense of a steamship company, a suffragette without a country, are excellent, but I am a good sailor and I don't mind."

"If I do get into England I shall go to work for Mrs. Pankhurst again at whatever there is to do."

ISAAC C. DAY IS DEAD AT BRADFORD

HAVERHILL, May 8.—Isaac C. Day, past commander of the Massachusetts Department, G. A. R., died today of apoplexy at his home in Bradford. He was seventy years old and is survived by four sons and two daughters. He served in the Civil War with the Thirty-fifth Massachusetts Regiment. He was wounded in the famous crater explosion in the assault upon Petersburg. He became a farmer after the war, served twelve years as Selectman of Boxford and was one of the best known politicians of Essex County.

GIRL IS AWED BY BEAUTY OF GEM SHE FINDS

Like the girlish joy of Marguerite in "Faust" where she sings "The Jewel song" as she decks herself with gems, reads the story of pretty Alice Leary, who told for the first time today of how she found a $2,000 diamond and pearl necklace and restored it to its owner, Mrs. Horace Chenery of Commonwealth avenue, a Back Bay society matron.

Until the girl was found by the AMERICAN today, her name had remained unknown as a result of Mrs. Chenery's refusal to reveal the identity of the finder of her necklace. Miss Leary received a $50 reward for finding the string of pearls and diamonds.

According to Miss Leary, who is a handsome brunette, and who lives at No. 122 Charles street, West End, in the short time she had the necklace in her possession she thought it so beautiful she clasped it about her own neck and looked in her mirror just to see how it looked on her. This is her story:

Frightened by Its Beauty.

I found the necklace about 1 o'clock last Thursday afternoon as I was crossing a street in the shopping district. Four pearls were missing. There were ninety-seven left in the string. In the cluster pin at the back were ten diamonds. I was on my may to dinner at the time. Really, it frightened me with its lustrous dazzle. I put in in my purse.

All through that afternoon I had to keep taking the necklace out and looking at it. My friends told me they were real pearls and diamonds.

That night at home I tried the necklace on, and I would stand in front of the mirror and see row it looked on me. I slept with it under my pillow. Once I woke up, lighted the gas and felt under my pillow to see if the necklace was still there.

Rewarded by Owner's Brother.

I read the ad Mrs. Chenery put in the papers, and sent a postal card as directed. Friday afternoon a detective came and told me he wanted the string of pearls. I told him I didn't know who he was and would give them only to the owner. He came back later with Mrs. Chenery's brother, who described them so accurately to me that I knew at once he was the right party. I gave him the necklace.

He gave me $50.

I never found anything in my life before, but the very next day when I went back to see if the four lost pearls were lying around, I found a chauffeur's badge in nearly the same place. I have not received any note or personal word from Mrs. Chenery. I was awfully glad to find the owner and restore her necklace to her.

HORSE TRAMPLES ON AGED MAN

John P. Savage, aged sixty-five, of No. 46 Dwight street, had a narrow escape from death today when a horse knocked him down in a stall of the stable at Village and Compton streets, South End, and trampled on him. Fellow employes attracted by Savage's cries dragged him from under the horse's hoofs, half unconscious. He was taken to the City Hospital suffering from multiple cuts and bruises. He will recover.

FRUIT DEALERS INTERESTED IN SUIT OVER ICE

NEW BEDFORD, May 14.—Every fruit shipper in New England is interested in an action for $6.25 in which F. L. Fisher & Co., Inc., fruit dealers, is being sued by the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad.

The bill is for ice, supplied by the railroad company, for a shipment of California fruit to the Fisher Company. The latter claims all charges for ice from California were paid and denies liability for the $6.25 for the ice between Houston and New Bedford.

The case was called today in the district court before Judge Milliken, but because of the absence throught attendance on the Superior Court, of Attorney Blackman for the railroad, the hearing was continued to May 15.

The suit is test a case and its result is awaited with interest.

PLAN TO WIDEN MANY STREETS IN CENTRE OF BOSTON

The Boston Chamber of Commerce believes that a large amount of money ought to be at once spent in widening and otherwise improving the main thoroughfares of Boston. The city planning committee insists that there are at present many miles of streets, the immediate widening of which is necessary. These, it claims, can be widened at the present time at a cost a great deal less than will be necessary in a few years to come.

The Mayor, the City Council and the street commissioners have been asked to give special consideration to the immediate widening or extension of the following:

North Beacon street, Franklin street, from Barry's Corner to Lincoln street, Brighton; Centre street, from Beach to Spring street, West Roxbury; Geneva avenue, from Columbia road to Bowdoin street; Morton street, from Washington street at Forest Hills to River street from Pierce square to Hyde Park Centre; Oakland and Ashland streets, from Mattapan square to Poplar street.

TO OPEN BABIES' NURSING STATION IN DORCHESTER

A medical and nursing station for babies, similar to the one now being conducted successfully in the new Elizabeth Peabody House, will be opened June 2 in the Dorchester House, Dorchester, by the Milk and Baby Hygiene Association. One hundred dollars has been donated for the proposed Dorchester station and efforts will be made to raise additional funds.

Nearly everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

24 I. W. W. SILK WORKERS ARRESTE IN JERSEY RIOT

PATERSON, N. J., May 8.—A series minor riots early today, in which gu were brandished and sticks and ston hurled, resulted in the arrest of twen four silk mill strikers, I. W. W. membe The strikers wandered through the stree singing and shouting insults at the hundreds of police and deputies who sto guard in the mill districts.

The injunction of William D. Haywo the I. W. W. leader: "Let neither owne nor strike-breakers enter the mills unle over your dead bodies," stirred t strikers to a high pitch.

CASSIDY SHOWS NEED OF CHECKING GLUCOSE USE IN MAKING CANDY

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

The glucose-in-candy bill will come up today in the Senate for consideration. The bill is aimed at what Dr. Wiley calls "The Champion Adulterant." Its object-in-chief is to forbid the sale of candy containing glucose, unless the purchaser is told that the candy does contain glucose.

There would seem to be no fair or reasonable objection to any law forcing the seller of foods to tell his customer what those foods contain. Yet the glucose manufacturers are unanimous in opposing this law, which would simply require them to be honest.

The average person who buys candy containing glucose is cheated, because he believes that candy is made of sugar. Why do the glucose men and the candy men object to telling the truth about their product?

Ask them this question and their answer is: "Why, glucose isn't unhealthful. It's as healthful as sugar."

Let's admit, for the moment, that it is just as healthful as sugar. But if it is, Why not tell the truth about it Mr. Glucose Man and Mr. Candy Man?"

The glucose men and the candy men answer: "The Public has a prejudice against glucose. It would hurt our trade."

Another question then: "If the public has a prejudice against glucose, and if that glucose is really all right, which is the best way to meet the public prejudice against it? Is it best to deceive the public into thinking it isn't getting glucose? Or is it best to sell glucose and glucose candy openly, on its merits, and so convince the public that glucose is really just as good as sugar?

I should be interested to hear the answers of the glucose men to that final question. They have argued in a circle, and are confounded by their own contentions.

I hope that the glucose-in-candy bill will pass the Legislature. But I must admit that I have my fears for the measure. Massachusetts is a great candy centre—and there is scarcely a candy man in Massachusetts who isn't fighting the bill. None of them is ready to tell the truth about his product. Also the glucose trust is one of the most powerful in the country. And the glucose trust doesn't want to be forced to sell its product honestly. Charles H. Innes, one of the most powerful men in Republican circles and the dominant factor in Ward 10 politics, was engaged as a lobbyist against the bill and represented the New England Confectioners' Association before the committee.

This Confectioners' Association has as its head, I believe, Edwin S. Forbes, president of the New England Confectionery Company, the manufacturers of Necco Sweets. This company is facing three cases in the Federal courts here, one charging the sale of candy containing arsenic and the others charging the sale of candy containing talc. Therefore it is to be expected that Mr. Forbes would be ready to fight a food bill as progressive as this glucose-in-candy bill is.

INSANE MOTHER SLAYS CHILDREN

PHILADELPHIA, May 8.—During a fit of temporary insanity, Mrs. Mary Kulass, twenty-three, arose early today, procured a butcher knife and killed her two sleeping children, Brizalau, twenty-two months, and Agnes, three months, almost severing their heads from their bodies.

Sophie Lyons Tells of BIGGEST BANK BURGLARY In Sunday's AMERICAN.

MORE MONEY FOR MAINE FUND IS RECEIVED

Further contributions to the $40,000 fund needed to complete the memorial to the battleship Maine and her martyr dead are credited from three United Spanish War Veteran camps, and a "Friend" of the Massachusetts department, today.

Following the offer made by William Randolph Hearst to contribute a dollar to the fund for every other dollar received from any source the country over, a determined effort is being made to raise the additional money needed to complete this patriotic work.

The original cost of the beautiful monument erected at Central Park, New York, which will be dedicated May 30, was only $143,000. This sum was collected by popular subscription. The Municipal Art Commission of New York later ruled that it was necessary to construct approaches and gates to the monument itself, which necessitated the expenditure of $40,000 additional.

The contributions credited to the local fund today were received direct by Merton E. Jenkins, adjutant Department Massachusetts, U. S. W. V., and forwarded by him to the National Committee. After allowing for a typographical error of $25 previously made in the list of contributions received by the AMERICAN, this makes the following total received to date:

Vincent Club Show 'One Lively Time,' Says Miss Slater

Esther Slater declares "Dick, the Dreamer," a comic opera to be presented tonight at the Boston Opera House by Vincent Club girls and Hasty Pudding Club boys for the Frances Willard Settlement, is sure to be a success. "It will be one lively time," said Miss Slater, who leads the "Harem Dance."

"Dick, the Dreamer," is founded on the nursery tales of Dick Whittington and his cat, the music of the opera being by Mrs. J. W. Courtney and the words by Mrs. C. D. Knowlton. It is full of witty lines, gorgeous costumes, snappy dances and catchy music.

The leading participants are: Mrs. Elizabeth Upham, T. Frederick Harry, Mrs. Charlotte Linnell Wrye, Margaret Whittington, Vinton Freedly, Charlotte Read, Harry E. Everett, A. Jerome Booth, Edward Earle, James Richards, Francis Wyman.

"Complexion Secrets Of An Actress"

In a recently issued volume bearing the above title, the author says: "Continuous use of grease paints, rouge and the like had ruined my complexion. My skin was colorless, wrinkled, coarse and punctured with large pores. In England I heard of the virtues of mercolized wax; my first experience with this marvelous substance convinced me it was more valuable than all cosmetics combined. Now whenever my complexion begins to go wrong, I get an ounce of mercolized wax at the nearest drug store, spread on a thin layer of it before retiring, washing it off next morning. The wax, after a few such treatments, seems literally to absorb the worn-out cuticle, when a brighter, healthier, younger-looking skin appears.

"For the wrinkles and enlarged pores, I began using a solution of saxolite, one ounce, dissolved in a half pint witch hazel. Bathing the face in this every day for awhile soon relieved the condition most wonderfully."

Book Shows King Edward Overcome by Onion Eaters

LONDON, May 8.—"Hawkins, you've been eating onions," exclaimed King Edward in disgust to his sergeant footman one day at Biarritz, according to the book, "What I Know," by C. W. Stamper, formerly private automobile expert to the late monarch.

"No, Your Majesty," protested the guilty footman.

"Yes, you have," replied the King. "Send Fehr to me."

Fehr appeared and King Edward stopped short and looked at his courier.

"What, you, too, have been eating onions?" he inquired.

The courier denied it, but the King sent him away with the command to send Postmaster Hilley to him. When the postmaster entered the room the king collapsed in a chair.

"I'm damned if you haven't been eating onions, too," he groaned.

'THE CHILD' IS NEW OFFERING AT PLYMOUTH

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

"The Child" was born at the Plymouth Theatre last evening and it proved to be a constitutionally delicate infant. It was gloriously blessed with sound lungs, however. Young playwrights, who labor with a definite purpose, are inclined to take the drama rather too seriously, which was the apparent difficulty with Miss Elizabeth Apthorp McFadden, who wrote the play. There were no drops of good cheer in Miss McFadden's pen, and "The Child" conducted you along a stormy, tearful course. It was a great night for the glooms.

Miss McFadden began "The Child" with a strong melodramatic idea, using a Cincinnati flood to start her characters on their despairing way. But not even the approaching waters that were battering down the buildings right and left could keep her central characters from discussing domestic matters when they should have been looking around for a means of hasty escape.

They put off escaping so long that the audience began to feel as if they deserved to go down the river with the tottering building. Calvin and Mary West were having a terrible time with life. Calvin had just come back from eight years in prison, and Mary was trying to lead the simple, virtuous career of a counterfeiter's wife. Calvin's rich father had already played his son a shabby trick by dying and cutting him off in the family will—almost.

The estate was left in trust for Calvin's child. The joke was on Calvin, as he had no child. But do not forget the rising Ohio and the rushing flood. To add to the cheerfulness of the surroundings a wretched young mother was dying in an adjoining room—she was already dead, declared Mary.

Right there was where Calvin became a proud father. He saved the supposedly dead woman's child and escaped. Then he returned home and moved into the family residence.

But there was no joy for the Wests. The dead mother returned to life and missed her daughter. Inasmuch as she lived, in Calvin's own town and had become reconciled with her father, it was only natural that she should return home. You wouldn't believe it, perhaps, but she was the daughter of the faithful trustee of Calvin's property. And you had all your characters in the same front yard.

Miss Emily Stevens, who played Mary West, deserved a better role. She needed help from the author most of the way, but it was not forthcoming. She played Mary desperately and extracted from the somewhat doubtful character all there was to extract. Through no fault of her own she was kept in hot water all evening.

The evident aim of Miss McFadden was to show in her play how two people could be reclaimed to decent living through their love for a child. The author made that point clear, but she kept her reformed characters in lies and deceit to the end. George Probert played West like a man on the edge of nervous prostration.

$250,000 FOR FAIR AT SAN FRANCISCO URGED IN REPORT

Massachusetts will appropriate $250,000 for its representation at the Panama-Pacific Exposition if the report of the legislative committee on Federal relations is adopted.

The present draft of the bill provides that $50,000 be expended this year, $150,000 next year and $50,000 in 1915.

Senators McLane and Eldridge reserved the right to dissent, favoring an appropriation of $350,000.

FETE AT WESLEYAN.

POWERS' ARMY SEIZES SCUTARI FOR ALBANIANS

BERLIN, May 8.—International troops representing Austria, Italy, France, Germany and England today took possession of Scutari, according to a telegram received from Cattaro.

The troops which were landed from the fleet which has been blockading the Montenegrin coast are under command of Admiral Burney.

Admiral Burney first held a conference with the civil governor of Scutari to fix the details of the terms of surrender.

The actual giving up of Scutari today by the Montenegrins puts an end to an incident which, for over a fortnight threatened to plunge Europe into war.

SHEATH SKIRTS ARE BANNED BY GUIDES

SARANAC LAKE, N. Y., May 8.—That women's narrow skirts should not be worn in the Adirondacks is the sentiment of the guides of Rainbow Lake, who held a meeting and condemned them. This action followed an accident which occurred on Sunday, when a woman angler, wearing a narrow skirt, tried to step from a boat and upset the boat and herself in the lake.

GERMANS LAY KEEL OF 50,000-TON LINER

LONDON, May 8.—The Times says the keel of a third Hamburg-American liner of 50,000 tons has just been laid down at the yards of Blohm & Voss at Hamburg. It is understood that the vessel will be similar in design to the Vaterland, which is slightly larger than the Imperator.

RESINOL STOPS SKIN TORMENTS

How This Wonderful Ointment Ends Itching and Heals Skin Eruptions.

No matter how long you have been tortured and disfigured by itching, burning, raw or scaly skin humors, just put a little of that soothing, antiseptic Resinol Ointment on the sores and the suffering stops right there! Healing begins that very minute, and your skin gets well so quickly you feel ashamed of the money you threw away on useless, tedious treatments.

Wherever drugs are sold, you can be just as sure of finding Resinol Ointment as court-plaster or a toothbrush. This is because doctors have prescribed it so regularly for the last eighteen years that every druggist knows he must keep it constantly in stock. It comes in opal jars, for fifty cents and one dollar, or you can try it at our expense. Write today to Dept. 18-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md., for a sample of Resinol Ointment and a miniature cake of Resinol Soap.

If You Want to See Wilson, Don't Call Him 'Doctor'

WASHINGTON, May 8.—President Wilson, whose biographical record carries a host of titles and which is tedious to read, does not like to be called "Doctor" Wilson any more.

A visitor asked to see the President. The messenger, whose duty it was to submit the names of callers, handed in the card announcing that "Mr. ——— desides to see Dr. Wilson."

The messenger was promptly admonished that the President must not be referred to by that title.

STRIKE CHIEF COLDWELL OUT AT HOPEDALE

MILFORD, May 8.—The most important strike developments today were the withdrawal as leader of Joseph Coldwell, leaving J. J. Ettor, M. L. Swift and Caleb S. Howard in full charge of the Draper Company strikers, and the arraignment of Camillo Vallavanti and Joseph Bello, striking Draper employes, on a charge of assaulting Jules Hirant of No. 5 Claflin street.

When Coldwell went to Hopedale he was practically without followers. A little later, it was announced that Ettor, Swift and Howard would hereafter direct and manage the strike, and the striker's committee of the I. W. W. issued the following:

"It is reported this morning that Mr. Coldwell has withdrawn from the strike, giving as his reasons that he has tried to eliminate the I. W. W. issue, and that he does not approve of many of Ettor's methods.

"These alleged reasons are unjust to the strikers, because it is well known that nearly all of them are organized in the I. W. W., and that the strike is distinctively an I. W. W. one."

After Coldwell's withdrawal, the strikers appointed Ettor, Howard and Swift to have full charge and to confer with the State Board of Arbitration in answer to a request for a conference.

At the hearing of the charges against Vallavanti and Bello, Dr. W. Clark, who attended Hirant, stated that the man may not recover. Judge Clifford bound the two defendants over until May 22 under $1,000 each.

A committee of the strikers will meet the officials of the Draper Company tomorrow with representatives of the State Board of Arbitration.

Coldwell was arrested today on a charge of being an accessory to the assault committed on Jules Harrant.

Letters have been sent by the strike leaders to Governor Foss, Mayor Fitzgerald, Police Commissioner O'Meara of Boston and the Metropolitan Park Commission calling upon these officials to withdraw the outside police here and in Hopedale.

Former Governor Draper today in a public statement condemned the I. W. W. as unpatriotic, un-American and tending toward revolution.

CHARGE STORAGE COMPANY WITH DAMAGE TO GOODS

Miss Virginia Wainwright of Prentiss street, Longwood, formerly of No. 911 Commonwealth avenue, told a jury in the Suffolk Superior Court today her mother's valuable paintings and furniture came back from the Massachusetts Storage Warehouse Company practically ruined.

Mrs. George H. Wainwright is suing the company to recover $831, which she says she had to pay out for repairs to the furniture and pictures.

"An Italian wood table was cut and indented. A mahogany desk was all scratched up. The dining room chairs were falling apart."

Attorney Berenson for the respondents said he would show the furniture was in poor condition when given to the company and if it was damaged it was done by unskilled movers.

He called Erosco Gleason of Cambridge, a mover of thirty years' experience, who told of damage he saw in the furniture before it was moved.

BRITISH YIELD IN OPIUM WAR

LONDON, May 8.—The government announces that no more opium will be sent from India to China this year. It says that it is probable that the traffic in opium between India and China will never be renewed. By this act Great Britain ends virtually a century of brual, mercenary insistence that China accept India's government-grown opium. Twice she went to war with China to force the latter to open her doors to the drug.

You Can Make Pure Lager BEER

In Your Own Home—with Johann Hofmeister Genuine Lager Beer Extract

You can now brew your own beer—best you ever tasted—easily, cheaply, right in your own home. With Johann Hofmeister Beer Extract anyone can make the same high quality lager beer that has been made in Germany for ages—in the same honest, old-fashioned way. Beer that's so tasty, wholesome, satisfying, every member of the family will surely be delighted with it. Better beer than you can buy in saloons or in bottles anywhere. And it will cost less than 3 cents a quart—a little over a half cent a glass!

Real Malt and Hop Beer at 11 Cents a Gallon Remember, it's not near-beer—not imitation beer—but real German style lager beer, made of select Barley Malt and the best Hops. Beer of fine, natural color—topped with a rich, creamy foam. Beer with snap and sparkle—clear and pure as can be—with life and health in every drop. And the taste—oh, delicious!

Johann Hofmeister Lager Beer Extract is guaranteed under the U. S. Food and Drugs Act, Serial No. 30,317. No license needed anywhere to make your own beer with this pure extract. Get a can of it today, follow the simple instructions—then you'll know why brewery beer can never be sold where this beer has been introduced.

50c can makes 3 gallons of beer.
75c can makes 7 gallons of beer.

Sold by all Druggists, or sent direct, prepaid, upon receipt of price (either size), by Johann Hofmeister, 106 Hofmeister Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

THIS is the way our women policemen will look. She is Ann Beasley, one of the Suffragists' "Finest," as she looked in her uniform in the New York suffrage parade.

Gaze upon her! "The Petticoat Officer."

It's a photograph of the biggest woman of the 30,000 in the great New York suffrage parade. It's Miss Ann Beasley, who headed the delegation from the Twenty-first Assembly District. Miss Beasley made a hit with the real policemen who lined the route of the parade up Fifth Avenue.

Miss "Officer" Beasley was commanding. Her uniform was that of a regular officer—the regulation cap and the jaunty coat. But in place of the blue trousers she wore a three-quarter-length skirt of excellent fit and hang.

She carried a night stick, which she twirled in approved Broadway fashion. Miss Beasley was greeted with cheers and hand-clapping all along the line of march.

SILVA GETS TWO YEARS FOR CAUSING HUB GIRL'S DEATH

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 8.—Isaac Silva, who was found guilty of involuntary manslaughter in causing the death of Marion Leonard of Boston, a chorus girl in the "Around the Clock" company, was today sentenced to two years in the penitentiary.

After deliberating nearly fifty hours the jury returned a sealed verdict last night, but it was not opened until today. Silva had injected morphine into the girl's thigh to relieve a pain in the leg. The same evening the girl ate a number of sandwiches and drank some beer. Later she took some medicine and the combination caused blood poisoning.

Marion Leonard was the girl's stage name. Her real name was Esther O'Marea.

GERMAN TEST OF FRIEDMANN VACCINE CURE

FRANKFORT-ON-MAIN, May 8.—Professor Paul Ehrlich, the discoverer of salvarsan, commenting on Dr. Friedmann's turtle vaccine treatment for tuberculosis, said today:

Dr. Friedmann's vaccine and cultures, from which his claims are derived, are in my hands. Their analysis is now in progress. It cannot be completed for many months. Until it is, it would be impossible as well as unfair to pass judgment of any kind upon the merits of Dr. Friedman's vaccine. My report, when it is ready, will be made exclusively to the Prussian Ministry of Education, under whose jurisdiction my institute operates.

Dr. Friedmann struck me as an earnest young man. His stanch adherent, Professor Schleich of Berlin, is a man of unimpeachable standing, whose support of any cause must demand for it serious consideration at the hands of the medical profession. If my tests of the Friedmann vaccine are somewhat delayed it will be partly because I have no human material at my disposal for experimental purposes, and must confine my work to animals.

Dr. Friedmann has been subjected to some criticism in America because he wants to profit by the sale of his alleged remedy. I personally do not sympathize with such criticism. I have never been able to figure out how suffering humanity benefits from the fact that the discoverer of any given panacea emerges from his work empty-handed.

FOLKS CRITICISES PRESS AGENTS OF FRIEDMANN CURE

WASHINGTON, May 8.—President Homer Folks of New York today opened the ninth annual meeting of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis at the New Willard. The convention will last until Saturday evening. Methods that have been used effectually in reducing the death rate from consumption will be discussed. The Friedmann "cure" was termed an "adverse factor" by President Folks. Folks carefully refrained from expressing any opinion as to the value of the Friedmann serum, but said that the task of securing local and State appropriations "has become vastly more difficult in the past few months because of the effective press agents of Dr. Friedmann."

My Husband Is Still Sober

We Are Doing Well Now. Two Bottles of Renova Cured Him

So writes Mrs. Bowman of Watertown; her experience is like that of hundreds of others and you can make it your experience if you have a dear one who is a victim of intemperance. Read her letter: "Would you please send me some of your circulars on Renova, as I have distributed all I had. My husband is still sober, two bottles cured him. We are doing well now. He travels nearly all the time and lives in the hotels and don't touch a drop." The woman who means business can have a sober husband. Just go to Riker-Jaynes' and get a package of Renova and put a little of it into his tea, coffee, soups, etc. Absolutely tasteless and harmless and given without his knowledge.

If you'd like to try it free—before you buy a dollar package, write in confidence to the Renova Co., 204 Broadway, New York, for a sample and proofs of what Renova does for victims of intemperance.

I. W. W. CHIEFS TRY TO START STRIKE AT WINCHESTER

In an attempt to call a general strike among the 200 employes of the Puffer Manufacturing Company at Winchester, 100 I. W. W. leaders and sympathizers started active picket duty in the streets of that town early today after the firm had appealed for and failed to secure a police order against the demonstration.

The trouble today followed an incipient strike of a few men at the Puffer plant yesterday. After these men returned to work the I. W. W. leaders was sent for.

BASEBALL PLAYERS SPECTATORS AT JOHNSON TRIAL

CHICAGO, May 8.—While the members of the Washington American League baseball team looked on, the case of John Arthur Johnson, negro pugilist, charged with violation of the white slave act, was heard today.

Estelle Painter, of Pittsburgh, who testified that she was keeper of a resort in the Levee district there, said that Belle Schreiber, whose relations with Johnson are the basis of the indictments, was an inmate of her resort.

She said she put the Schreiber woman out of the place. The government then produced witnesses who told of the Schreiber woman's arrival from Pittsburgh and of her being established in a flat here.

Richie Considers Cross His Closest Foe for Title

SPOKANE, Wash., May 8.—"Before we leave Spokane this week I am confident I shall be able to announce definitely Willie Ritchie's July Fourth engagement," said Billy Nolan, manager of the lightweight champion, shortly after his arrival in Spokane.

"Promoters in New York and California have been keeping the wires pretty hot since we left Denver, and we are really very near to an agreement. There is only one man in New York that I consider a good match for Ritchie. That is Leach Cross. Britton is not to be considered, for he has been beaten by other fighters and particularly by Ritchie himself when the latter first broke into the professional game.

"Cross is the biggest New York card and really the only one back there that deserves a chance. McFarland simply won't make weight, and it is unnecessary to go into the many reasons why we will simply take the stand on the weight question that all other champions ahead of us have taken.

Sidelights on Sports

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

HAP MYERS, the elongated first baseman of the Boston Nationals, is coming into his own. Hap was ill on the Southern training trip, and although he should have been resting, he kept hustling every day, and as a result, beat out the other two candidates who were in the race with him for the position of regular first baseman on the team. The other two men were Frank Metz and "Mary" Calhoun. Hap looked better than Metz at all stages, in spite of his physical weakness during the training period. Calhoun is a hustling lad, but he has not had the experience that Myers has had, so when it came to picking a first baseman, Stallings had to pass the lad up. Calhoun is still with the team, and has the earmarks of a fine ball player, but he needs more seasoning.

HAP was still weak and in bad health up to a short time ago, but he is now well again, and is getting back his strength. All this is showing in his playing. He is covering the bag in splendid style. His great height and reach give him an advantage over most first-basemen. But it is at the bat that he is showing his worth. Yesterday Stallings made a little shift in his batting order, putting Myers second on the list, because Connolly wasn't laying down the bunts when he should have been doing so. Myers is by all odds the best bunter on the team. This was shown yesterday when twice in the last part of the game Maranville, the first man up, "got on." The game, being close, it was up to Hap to sacrifice the Rabbit to second. He did so both times with perfect bunts. It is true Maranville was not able to score, but Hap had done his part.

IN the fifth inning it was Myers' single that sent in the tying run, and in the twelfth it was Myers whose single sent Maranville from first to third, from which point the little fellow scored the winning run on Connolly's sacrifice fly to left, which was muffed by Carey.

WILSON COLLINS, the Vanderbilt University pitcher, secured recently by the Boston Nationals, may never pitch a game of ball for that organization. The reason is that he promises to be a much better outfielder than he is a pitcher. He was somewhat of a whirlwind on the mound against various college teams, but he is a spitball pitcher and while he was able to get away with it against collegians, Stallings is of the opinion that he couldn't get away with it in the big league.

WHEN Collins reported to Stallings a few days ago, the Boston manager was struck by the active appearance of the young man. He soon found out that Collins could run like a deer, and one day while the former collegian was shacking balls in the morning practice Stallings saw him go after a fly ball. He handled the fungo like a veteran. Thereupon Stallings ordered the batter to send several flies in Collins' direction. The result of it all is that Stallings is now coaching him for an outfield position.

COLLINS has shown such aptitude in the outfield that it is more than likely Stallings will try him out in a regular game before long. It may be that Collins will get a chance the first time the opponent sends a left-handed pitcher to box. Little Joe Connolly is not partial to southpaws as he is a left-handed hitter. Collins bats right-handed and would not be so badly handicapped at the bat. In practice Collins hits the ball hard. As a fielder he is a sure catch and his speed enables him to cover a vast amount of territory.

PATRONS of the South End grounds are likely to see Paul Strand, the kid pitcher from the Northwest, in action before long. Stallings has been nursing him along carefully and the youngster is nearly ready to get his first tryout. Strand attracted considerable attention from the critics on the Spring training trip of the Boston Nationals. He is a tall, pale-faced left-hander and has an awful lot of "stuff" on the ball. In the South opposing batsmen marvelled when they faced his pitching and every one predicted a great future for him. He is about the youngest, if not actually the youngest, member of the team. Stallings and many others believe he will create a profound impression in the big league after he has passed through the nervousness of the first few contests.

RAN into Dr. A. A. Cliff, the Red Sox physician, on his way to the game. He says Jake Stahl went through the operation on his foot in splendid shape and that the big fellow will be able to go home in a day or two. If things go along all right Jake will be able to join the team in the West in about twelve days. A bone was removed from Stahl's foot and it is expected he will have no further trouble with a member that has been bothering him for a long time.

JOE WOOD, just before taking a train for the West with the Red Sox told the writer that he is expected to be able to resume his duties in the box before the week is out. He may pitch the last game in Cleveland.

PICK CORNELL TO WIN MEET WITH HARVARD

By THOMAS J. HALPIN.

(Quarter-Mile Champion of United States and Canada).

The result of Saturday's dual meet between Harvard and Cornell will be awaited with interest for the winner of this meet will be made a favorite in the great Intercollegiate championships which will take place the latter part of this month.

Even if Harvard does not win, and at the present time it is almost impossible to see how the Crimson will nose out Moakley's pets, the Cambridge athletes will bear close watching, for sport lovers will be able to get an idea of the probable outcome of the English and American dual college meet which will probably take place this coming Summer.

Moakley will come to Cambridge with one of the best track teams that has ever represented Cornell. All of the men have been developed by the Cornell trainer, who believes in bringing out his own athletic stars. The greatest of these stars is the wonderful John Paul Jones, who is the holder of the world's mile record and who will probably also hold the world's half-mile record if he keeps his present form.

There are few who give Jones a thought in connection with the half-mile record. Although there are athletes in this country who have covered the distance in faster time, including Sheppard and Meredith, Jones has the greatest chance to set a new record. In all of his races he has had to run the half-mile after competing in a hard mile race, yet he has been able to do close to 1m. 54s. for the distance.

Jones will be a starter in the mile and half-mile races. The Crimson team has not the advantage of having a star man in either of these events. In the half-mile race, Koch who is the most likely looking, has not been under 1m. 57s. for the distance, while the best Harvard milers have not shown better than 4m. 24s. for the mile.

Cornell should win both first places in these two events, while in the half-mile, Snyder, another Cornell man, should be able to place second, as he has shown 1m. 55s. for the distance.

STEVE KENNEDY BATTLES EAGAN IN GO TONIGHT

By RINGSIDE.

JOE EAGAN and Steve Kennedy should should furnish a fast lightweight battle when they clash in a twelve-round bout before the Unity Club in Lawrence this evening. Both boys are in perfect condition for the fray and are confident of winning.

Eagan has been performing in great style lately. He has won twenty-five out of his last twenty-seven bouts. He was defeated by Jack Britton and Gilbert Gallant. Joe is a big favorite in Lawrence as a result of his decisive victories in that city over "Young" McDonough and Mickey Devine.

Kennedy is one of the classiest 133-pounders in New England. He believes that his speed and left jab will bring about the downfall of his opponent tonight.

"YOUNG" KETCHELL of New York, who has fought such well-known boys as "Knockout" Sweeney, "Young" Britt, "Kid" Williams, Johnny Dundee and Mickey Brown, is in our midst. Ketchell came over from the big village yesterday with a chip on his shoulder and informs me that he is willing to meet any 116 to 118-pounder in New England. He is being managed by Max Harris, whose address is General Delivery, Boston.

THE St. Patrick's T. A. Society is going to hold an amateur boxing show on Thursday evening, May 15. There will be bouts at 115, 125 and 135 pounds. Entries close May 12 with Dennis J. Driscoll, No. 30 Ward street, Brockton.

The bouts scheduled at the Atlas A. A. for tomorrow evening have been postponed until next Tuesday. Matchmaker Johnny McGann today received a wire from K. O. Brennan, asking for another week so as to be in the very best of condition in order to put up a slashing fight against Mike Gibbons.

The Atlas A. A. is out to give the "fans" the best show possible and instead of putting on a substitute for Brennan postponed the show. The same preliminaries will be used.

HARVARD CUBS MEET ANDOVER ON THE TRACK

By J. O. JOHNSTONE.

Manager Cunningham and his assistant Clements will lead a squad of thirty men of the Harvard freshman track team to compete against the Phillips Andover Academy track team on Saturday.

Nothing has been heard of the Andover Athletes since last Fall, when they ran against several school and college freshmen in their annual cross-country run, and as usual, they are due to spring a few surprises on the Harvard men.

However, Andover has no Teschners or Worthingtons, and therefore it will be hard for the school to defeat the freshmen on Saturday.

Lamont of Harvard should duplicate his win in the half mile, and Bingham ought to gain the premier honors in the quarter-mile. Carey, the Andover captain, may have something to do with altering these predictions.

PILGRIMS OUT FOR CLEAN UP OF PIRATES

When George Stallings promised Boston that he would set down in South End Park this season a ball team that would finish better than eighth, even this meagre offering was scoffed at. At this writing, however, this outfit which Stallings collected in a hurry has left Cincinnati considerably in the lurch and, drawing a line through the play of yesterday and the day before, is right on the trail of Fred Clarke's pennant possibilities from Pittsburgh.

It may sound absurd to suggest a "cleanup" of the Pirates in this series. But Stallings still has an ace in the hole in Billy James, who is likely to perform tomorrow, and Otto Hess, who had very good success against the Pirates last season, is about due to work today. Stallings is only two and a half games behind the Pirates and if, by some marvelous turn of the tricks of baseball, he were to take two more, he would be barking and biting at Clarke's heels, and only a half game behind him.

From Boston the Pirates go to Philadelphia for four games with the league leaders, who are playing classy baseball and uncorking a prime quality of pitching these days. If the Smoky City ball players cannot bat effectively against Perdue, Tyler and the Pilgrims, how should they fare against Seaton, Alexander, Brennan and the Phillies?

While the Pirates are in Philadelphia, St. Louis will visit in the South End. The Pirates and Cardinals broke even in their Western engagements with each other. So—by the "dope process"—it is not too much to expect Boston to do as well with St. Louis as with Pittsburgh.

Of course, this is a dream. But who predicted that the Pilgrims would beat the Pirates 3 to 2 in ten innings Tuesday and would come back with a 2 to 1 victory in twelve innings yesterday?

The Bostonians won decisively and clearly on their merits yesterday. Tyler outpitched O'Toole, and his team outfielded, outran, outgeneraled and outbatted Pittsburgh.

BASEBALL CHATTER

After losing fifteen of the sixteen games played in the East the Yankees invaded Detroit yesterday and grabbed off an easy victory.

* * *

Ray Keating, the recruit boxman of the Yankees who pitched yesterday, not only secured a shutout, but accomplished the seemingly impossible—he fanned Ty Cobb twice. The Yankees now have three victories to their credit, and Keating has won them all.

* * *

It required ten innings yesterday for the Phillies to land a 4 to 3 victory over the Cardinals.

* * *

Old Man Lajoie of the Naps continues to "go back." He made an error the other day and cannot hit any better than .403.

* * *

The Senators won from the White Sox yesterday by superior hitting.

* * *

"Good Night" Baker, the Athletics' third sacker, resumed his old tricks yesterday—he smashed out a home run.

* * *

C. Webb Murphy, who owns the Cubs, is a much worried man these days. When he was inspecting the new Ebbetts field the owner of the Dodgers jokingly asserted that the Dodgers were going to be the Cubs' jinx this year. "If your team wins even one series from my team this year," said Murphy to Ebbetts, "I'll jump off the highest spot in your grandstand." The highest spot is very, very far from terra firma, and the Dodgers are playing a brand of baseball that makes it look as if they'll surely grab one if not more series from the Cubs.

* * *

Falkenberg of the Naps won his fifth straight game yesterday when he pitched his team to a 4 to 1 victory over the Red Sox.

* * *

Marty O'Toole, the "$22,500 beauty," was beaten yesterday in a pitcher's duel with Tyler of the Pilgrims, the game going twelve innings.

* * *

The Athletics tightened their grip on first place in the American League yesterday by defeating the Browns in a close game.

* * *

Brooklyn lost to the Cubs yesterday 4 to 3, and there isn't a fan in Brooklyn who isn't declaring that the Dodgers were robbed of victory by a few weird decisions toward the close of the game.

* * *

Matty, the old master, took up the twirling duties for the Giants yesterday, after Ames had wabbled in the second, and of course the Reds lost.

* * *

Bryan, a recent recruit, assumed first base roles for the Browns yesterday, and the way he handled the job gives rise to the belief that his stay in the major league is not to be very brief. He handled difficult throws like a veteran and figured in two lightning double plays.

* * *

"Sasey" Stengel, the demon cloter of the Dodgers, is coining money these days. Tuesday he slammed the ball against the big bull in the right field fence, thereby acquiring $50 prize, and he repeated the stunt yesterday.

* * *

Stengel's first name really isn't "Casey." He came from Kansas City (K. C.) and immediately the fans christened him "Casey."

CLEVELAND, O., May 8.—An investigation by American League officials was to begin today into the causes of the fist fight participated in by practically all the members of the Red Sox and Nap teams, immediately following yesterday's game. Nunamaker, the Red Sox catcher, is said to have applied some name to Olson, the Nap shortstop, during the game, and Olson is said to have attacked Nunamaker just outside the clubhouse. It soon became a free-for-all fight.

Acting Manager "Heinie" Wagner jumped into his old position in shortfield today looking for vengeance for an incident that caused his summary removal from the field yesterday. He also ordered Duffy Lewis to work in left field and there were numerous symptoms that the Sox intended to make a savage fight for today's game in revenge for their 4 to 1 defeat yesterday.

Graney was stunned when his head came in contact with Carrigan's knee. He lay on the ground for minutes while restoratives were applied. Later he resumed play. The bad blood engendered by this incident led to further hostilities. Every close play brought on an argument. Carisch interfered with Janvrin when the latter tried to double up Falkenberg at first in this inning and Birmingham scored. There was such a hot exchange of words over this play that "Heinie" Wagner was banished not only from the bench but the playing field by Umpire McGreevy.

In the eighth inning Olson laid down a sacrifice and when Pitcher Foster covered first to take Engle's toss Olson crashed into Foster and, it is alleged by the Boston players, deliberately struck the pitcher in the head with his fist.

The once kittenish Naps have been transformed into a fighting bunch and they naturally resented this. It is said that Third Baseman Olson of the Naps and Catcher Nunamaker of the champions, who took up Foster's quarrel, had a lively exchange of fisticuffs with honors about even. One story had it that Olson had several teeth knocked out, but this was denied today by the Swede, although he refused to show his teeth. It was also reported that Tris Speaker was spiked. Tris said this morning that the story was not true.

Right Off the Bat

By RILEY.

"RABBIT" MARANVILLE is the busy lad of this series. Tuesday he made three hits in four times up and drove in two of the three runs. Yesterday he hit three times in six appearances and scored the winning run. Tuesday he had twelve chances, with one error; yesterday, eight chances, with no error.

* * *

MARTY O'TOOLE gave the only base on balls handed to Boston up to date in the Pittsburgh engagement. It was an intentional pass, too, Titus being given a base in the eighth, O'Toole preferring to play for Mann, a right hander who was not hitting. This filled the bases, with two out. Stallings immediately "crossed" O'Toole by sending up Kirke, left handed like Titus. Kirke hoisted a [illegible] fly to Booe, near the [illegible] field bleachers. But for a stiff head wind it would probably have gone into the crowd and broken up the ball game.

* * *

THIS Booe of the Pirates is the youngster who Barney Dreyfuss thinks is one of the fastest outfielders in the game. His boss' opinion makes it look bad for Artie Hofman. A friend told Dreyfuss that Booe wouldn't last on account of his name; once the crowd started yelling it he would be frightened off the diamond. "All right," said Dreyfuss, "if that's the case, he'll stuff his ears with cotton."

* * *

HOFMAN got into yesterday's game after Viox unsuccessfully pinch hit for Wilson, who had struck out twice and been hit once. Meusor succeeded Booe who [illegible] hit Tyler. Before Meusor got into the field, however, Hendrix pinch hit for Booe and struck out on three pitched balls.

* * *

THE wind that blew over South End Park turned back the long swipes and nothing over one base was scored. Boston made nine hits and Pittsburgh eight, but of the seventeen safe ones not one was good for extra bases. Byrne tried to make two sacks on a left field ground drive in the first, but Connelly and Sweeney disposed of him with dispatch.

* * *

WHEN Whaling had tied the game in the fifth and Maranville, on third, and Myers, on second, were gazing haughtily at the plate, Connelly elevated the ball over the right field fence so close to the foul line that the crowd thought it a home run and yelped a noisy approval. Although headed fair the wind blew the ball a foot foul as it passed over the fence. After this effort Connelly struck out.

* * *

HONUS WAGNER broke into the error column again yesterday. In the third, after receiving Miller's throw, forcing Tyler at second, Wagner tried to get the ball back in time to double Maranville at first. The throw was low, passed Miller and the "Rabbit" scooted to second.

* * *

THIS was Wagner's second league game this year. He had his batting eye again. Honus made three of his team's eight singles. He trotted leisurely to first on his first hit of the season—in the second inning—but, after being sacrificed along to second, Tyler caught him a mile off that bag. The next time he put through a perfect hit and run, Byrne's dash for second drawing Maranville out of position, whereupon Honus poked a single directly through shortfield. The last time he hit there was nobody "on." In the eleventh, after fouling off six balls, Wagner swung at one so hard that he nearly tipped over—and struck out.

WITHIN THE LAW

By MARVIN DANA from the Play of BAYARD VEILLER

PART I.

MARY had scarcely learned from Aggie an account of Cassidy's threatening invasion when the maid announced that Mr. Irwin had called.

"Show him in—in just two minutes," Mary directed.

"Who's the gink?" Aggie demanded with that slangy diction which was her habit.

"You [illegible] know," Mary returned, [illegible] He's the lawyer retained by General Hastings in the matter of a certain breach-of-promise suit."

"Oh, you mean yours truly," Aggie exclaimed, not in the least abashed by her forgetfulness in an affair that concerned herself so closely. "Hope he's brought the money. What about it?"

"Leave the room now," Mary ordered, crisply. "When I call to you, come in, but be sure and leave everything to me. Merely follow my lead. And, Agnes—be very ingenue."

"Oh, I'm wise—I'm wise," Aggie nodded, as she hurried out toward her bedroom. "I'll be a squab—surest thing you know."

Next moment, Mary gave a formal greeting to the lawyer who represented the man she planned to mulct effectively, and invited him to a chair near her, while she herself retained her place at the desk, within a drawer of which she had just locked the formidable-appearing document received from Harris.

Irwin lost no time in coming to the point.

"I called in reference to this suit, which Miss Agnes Lynch threatens to bring against my client, General Hastings."

Mary regarded the attorney with a level glance, serenely expressionless as far as could be achieved by eyes so clear and shining, and her voice was cold as she replied with significant brusqueness.

"It's not a threat, Mr. Irwin. The suit will be brought."

"Plain Blackmail"

The lawyer frowned, and there was a strident note in his voice when he answered, meeting her glance with an uncompromising stare of hostility.

"You realize, of course," he said finally, "that this is merely plain blackmail."

There was not the change of a feature in the face of the woman who listened to the accusation. Her eyes steadfastly retained their clear gaze into his, her voice was still coldly formal, as before.

"If it's blackmail, Mr. Irwin, why don't you consult the police?" she inquired, with manifest disdain. Mary turned to the maid, who now entered in response to the bell she had sounded a minute before. "Fanny, will you ask Miss Lynch to come in, please?" Then she faced the lawyer again, with an aloofness of manner that was contemptuous. "Really Mr. Irwin," she drawled, "why don't you take this matter to the police?"

The reply was uttered with conspicuous exasperation.

"You know perfectly well," the lawyer said bitterly, "that General Hastings cannot afford such publicity. His position would be jeopardized."

"Oh, as for that," Mary suggested evenly, and now there was a trace of flippancy in her fashion of speaking. "I'm sure the police would keep your complaint a secret. Really, you know, Mr. Irwin, I think you had better take your troubles to the police, rather than to me. You will get much more sympathy from them."

The lawyer sprang up, with an air of sudden determination.

"Very well, I will then," he declared, sternly. "I will."

Mary, from her vantage point at the desk across from him, smiled a smile that would have been very engaging to any man under more favorable circumstances, and she pushed in his direction the telephone that stood there.

"3100, Spring," she remarked encouragingly, "will bring an officer almost immediately." She leaned back in her chair and surveyed the baffled man amusedly.

Lawyer Furious

The lawyer was furious over the failure of his effort to intimidate this extraordinarily self-possessed young woman, who made a mock of his every thrust. But he was by no means at the end of his resources.

"Nevertheless," he rejoined, "you know perfectly well that General Hastings never promised to marry that girl. You know—" He broke off as Aggie entered the drawing-room.

Now, the girl was demure in seeming, a most [illegible] creature, very fair and dainty, guileless surely, with those untroubled eyes of blue, those softly curving lips of warmest red and the more delicate bloom in the rounded cheeks. There were the charms of innocence and simplicity in the manner of her as she stopped just within the doorway, whence she regarded Mary with a timid, pleading gaze, her slender little form poised lightly as if for flight.

"Did you want me, dear?" she asked. There was something half plaintive in the modulated cadences of the query.

"Agnes," Mary answered affectionately, "this is Mr. Irwin, who has come to see you in behalf of General Hastings."

"Oh!" the girl murmured, her voice quivering a little, as the lawyer, after a short nod, dropped again into his seat; "oh, I'm so frightened!" She hurried, fluttering, to a low stool behind the desk, beside Mary's chair, and there she sank down, drooping slightly, and catching hold of one of Mary's hands as if in mute pleading for protection against the fear that beset her chaste soul.

"Nonsense!" Mary exclaimed, soothingly. "There's really nothing at all to be frightened about, my dear child." Her voice was that with which one seeks to cajole a terrified infant. "You mustn't be afraid, Agnes. Mr. Irwin says that General Hastings did not promise to marry you. Of course you understand, my dear, that under no circumstances must you say anything that isn't strictly true, and that, if he did not promise to marry you, you have no case—none at all. Now, Agnes, tell me: did General Hastings promise to marry you?"

Not in Writing

"Oh, yes—oh, yes, indeed!" Aggie cried, falteringly. "And I wish he would. He's such a delightful old gentleman."

As she spoke, the girl let go Mary's hand and clasped her own together ecstatically.

The legal representative of the delightful old gentleman scowled disgustedly at this outburst. His voice was portentous, as he put a question.

"Was that promise made in writing?"

"No," Aggie answered, gushingly. "But all his letters were in writing, you know. Such wonderful letters!" She raised her blue eyes toward the ceiling in a naive rapture. "So tender, and so—er, interesting!" Somehow, the inflection on the last word did not altogether suggest the ingenuous.

"Yes, yes, I dare say," Irwin agreed, hastily, with some evidences of chagrin. He had no intention of dwelling on that feature of the letters, concerning which he had no doubt whatsoever, since he knew the amorous General very well indeed. They would be interesting, beyond shadow of questioning, horribly interesting. Such was the confessed opinion of the swain himself who had written them in his folly—horribly interesting to all the reading public of the country, since the General was a conspicuous figure.

Mary intervened with a suavity that infuriated the lawyer almost beyond endurance.

"But you're quite sure, Agnes," she questioned gently, "that General Hastings did promise to marry you?" The candor of her manner was perfect.

And the answer of Aggie was given with a like convincing emphasis.

"Oh, yes!" she declared tensely. "Why, I would swear to it." The limpid eyes, so appealing in their soft lusters, went first to Mary, then gazed trustingly into those of the routed attorney.

"You see, Mr. Irwin, she would swear to that," emphasized Mary.

"We're Beaten"

"We're beaten," he confessed dejectedly, turning his glance toward Mary whom, plainly, he regarded as his real adversary in the combat on his client's behalf. "I'm going to be quite frank with you, Miss Turner, quite frank," he stated with more geniality, though with a very crestfallen air. Somehow, indeed, there was just a shade too much of the crestfallen in the fashion of his utterance, and the woman whom he addressed watched warily as he continued. "We can't afford any scandal, so we're going to settle at your own terms." He paused expectantly, but Mary offered no comment; only maintained her alert scrutiny of the man. The lawyer, therefore, leaned forward with a semblance of frank eagerness. Instantly, Aggie had become agog with greedily blissful anticipations, and she uttered a slight ejaculation of joy; but Irwin paid no heed to her. He was occupied in taking from his pocket a thick bill-case, and from this presently a sheaf of banknotes, which he laid on the desk before Mary, with a little laugh of discomfiture over having been beaten in the contest.

As he did so, Aggie thrust forth an avaricious hand, but it was caught and held by Mary before it reached above the top of the desk, and the avaricious gesture passed unobserved by the attorney.

"We can't fight where ladies are concerned," he went on, assuming, as best he might contrive, a chivalrous tone. "So, if you will just hand over General Hastings' letters, why, here's your money."

Much to the speaker's surprise, there followed an interval of silence, and his puzzlement showed in the knitting of his brows. "You have the letters, haven't you?" he demanded, abruptly.

Aggie coyly took a thick bundle from its resting place on her rounded bosom.

"They never leave me," she murmured, with dulcet passion. There was in her voice a suggestion of desolation—a desolation that was the blighting effect of letting the cherished missives go from her.

"Well, they can leave you now, all right," the lawyer remarked unsympathetically, but with returning cheerfulness, since he saw the end of his quest in visible form before him. He reached quickly forward for the packet, which Aggie extended willingly enough. But it was Mary who, with a swift movement, caught and held it.

"Not quite yet, Mr. Irwin, I'm afraid," she said, calmly.

"See Own Lawyer"

The lawyer barely suppressed a violent ejaculation of annoyance.

"But there's the money waiting for you," he protested, indignantly.

The rejoinder from Mary was spoken with great deliberation, yet with a note of determination that caused a quick and acute anxiety to the General's representative.

"I think," Mary explained tranquilly, "that you had better see our lawyer, Mr. Harris, in reference to this. We women know nothing of such details of business settlement."

"Oh, there's no need for all that formality," Irwin urged, with a great appearance of bland friendliness.

"Just the same," Mary persisted, unimpressed, "I'm quite sure you would better see Mr. Harris first." There was a cadence of insistence in her voice that assured the lawyer as to the futility of further pretense on his part.

"Oh, I see," he said disagreeably, with a frown to indicate his complete sagacity in the premises.

"I thought you would, Mr. Irwin," Mary returned, and now she smiled in a kindly manner, which, nevertheless, gave no pleasure to the chagrined man before her. As he rose, she went on crisply: "If you'll take the money to Mr. Harris, Miss Lynch will meet you in his office at 4 o'clock this afternoon, and, when her suit for damages for breach of promise has been legally settled out of court, you will get the letters. . . . Good afternoon, Mr. Irwin."

The lawyer made a hurried bow which took in both of the women, and walked quickly toward the door. But he was arrested before he reached it by the voice of Mary speaking again, still in that imperturbable evenness which so rasped his nerves for all its mellow resonance. But this time there was a sting, of the sharpest, in the words themselves.

"Oh, you forgot your marked money, Mr. Irwin," Mary said.

The lawyer wheeled and stood staring at the speaker with a certain sheepishness of expression that bore witness to the completeness of his discomfiture. Without a word, after a long moment in which he perceived intently the delicate, yet subtly energetic, loveliness of this slender woman, he walked back to the desk, picked up the money, and restored it to the bill case. This done, at last he spoke, with a new respect in his voice, a quizzical smile on his rather thin lips.

"Young woman," he said emphatically, "you ought to have been a lawyer." And with that laudatory confession of her skill, he finally took his departure while Mary smiled in a triumph she was at no pains to conceal, and Aggie sat gaping astonishment over the surprising turn of events.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

As the lawyer put the banknotes on the table, Aggie thrust forth an avaricious hand, but it was caught and held by Mary before it reached above the top of the desk, and the avaricious gesture passed unnoticed by the attorney.

His Great Piano Sales

A Piano Sale here is always a sacrifice, always a bargain sale, always a mark-down sale. The very nature of business, as the public knows, is one of sacrifice. The business here is not conducted like the business of a regular Piano store down town, where they are expected to make a profit on each piano—where they get their profit DIRECTLY out of the sale of pianos. We don't let any piano loaf around on the floor of the Roxbury Storage Salesrooms—it comes in, in DUE TIME a Sacrifice tag is clapped on to it, be it high grade, low grade or middle grade, and it is sold to the first man or woman who wants it for the price marked on the tag—not a cent more or less. The selling price is made on the Roxbury Storage Salesrooms' "Expense percentage" basis, and is figured to let the accounts out clean and clear, without regard to profit—so you can see easily by this statement how these sales must necessarily be sacrifices. Someone's loss is your gain.

The gilded piano stores, with their costly appointments, their high-salaried sales agents, their sellers' commissions, etc., are no place for the economical piano buyer to go. Take the trouble to look around a little, go up where the rents are not so high and buy your piano right.

The Mistakes of Jennie

By Hal Coffman

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a City Girl

"Gee, this is a swell place!"

CHAPTER I.

THE meeting between Jennie and THE MAN all happened in the usual sort of way. Jennie worked in a big office building downtown. THE MAN had often seen her leaving her home. Whenever he did, he would follow and try to get a seat opposite her in the car and would then stare and stare, hoping for some recognition, but Jennie was always busy reading and never noticed THE MAN. If she had, she would have seen he was rather "oldish" and undoubtedly wouldn't have given him another thought.

One rainy day, however, Jennie started home, and when she got down to the street door found it was raining in torrents. Then, "accidentally"—quite "accidentally"—THE MAN happened to be there and offered to share his umbrella with her—as far as the car; and—wasn't that strange?—he took the same car as she did. Why, then, they could ride along together—couldn't they?—and poor little Jennie didn't see anything wrong in that, as he seemed so "nice" and almost as if he might have a little daughter of his own.

The next night THE MAN "accidentally" happened along just at the time Jennie was leaving for home.

"Why, how do you do?" said THE MAN. "Now isn't that the strangest thing we should meet again—and couldn't we have dinner at a nice, big restaurant, with lots of lights and music?"—because, you see, his family was away and he was so lonesome.

Jennie could phone home and say "she had to work late, but would be home real early." Then they went to a big, bright restaurant and had a nice dinner, with the funniest, bubbliest wine, that tasted so queer to Jennie that she just sipped a little of it.

THE MAN was so polite and nice and Jennie was happier than she ever thought of being before and couldn't help looking around with big brown eyes and saying to THE MAN: "Gee! This is a swell place!"

Their Married Life

Warren Rails at the Improved Ways of Getting the Water In and Out of the Bathtub

THIS is Mabel Herbert Urner's series, "Married Life the Third Year," under a new title, by which the series will be known in the future. It was Mrs. Urner's desire that the title be changed in response to the requests of her hosts of readers and friends. "Their Married Life" will continue to deal with the joys and trials of Warren and Helen, whose friends among readers of the Boston AMERICAN'S Magazine Page number hundreds of thousands.

EDITOR.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

"DEAR, the hot water won't run!"

Warren, who was still half asleep, turned over, drew the bed clothes closer and yawned a gruff:

"What's that?"

"The hot water won't run," repeated Helen. "Do you suppose it's cut off?"

"How the devil do I know? Call down to the janitor—tell him you want hot water."

Helen went to the phone, but could not get the janitor. The hall boy told her something was going wrong with the boiler.

By this time Warren was up, and Helen found him in the bathroom aimlessly turning the faucet on and off—but no sign of hot water.

"Well, what'd he say?" impatiently.

"I couldn't get the janitor, dear, but the hall boy said something's the matter with the boiler."

"Told you to talk to the janitor, didn't I?" snarled Warren, glad of a chance to vent his ill-humor on her. "That boy don't know anything."

Angrily he strode out to the phone, Pussy Purr-mew running gayly after the tassel on his bathrobe that trailed behind on the floor. He got the janitor on the wire, but did not roar at him as savagely as Helen had expected. Perhaps the policy of keeping right with the janitor modified his outburst.

"We have no hot water up here," with cold precision.

"Sorry sir," answered the janitor "but one of the big pipes on the roof's broken. We've sent for the plumber."

"Tell Maggie she'll have to heat some water for my bath," growled Warren, as he hung up the receiver. "Bring me what's in the kettle right away—I'll shave with that."

Satisfying Warren

Helen hurried out to the kitchen.

"Maggie, Mr. Curtis wants you to heat some hot water for his bath—I'll take this in for him to shave with." Unheeding Maggie's protest that it was for the "coffee," she emptied the steaming teakettle into a long-handled saucepan. "Now, fill up this and the soup kettle and those two big saucepans—heat as much as you can."

"Ain't they goin' to turn it on pretty soon, m'am?" demurred Maggie. "No, the janitor says the big pipe's bursted. Now, hurry up," and, carrying the steaming saucepan, where Warren was stropping his razor.

"Here, dear, here's enough for you to shave with. She's heating all she can for your bath."

Helen, who always got up at least half an hour before Warren, had shiveringly taken a cold sponge as best she could. But it did not occur to her to suggest that Warren do the same. Her instinct to cater to his personal comfort was so deep rooted that since he wanted his warm bath she did not think of considering the work or inconvenience.

"That water hot yet?" he called out to test the water. It was hot in all except the big soup kettle.

"Bring it on anyway," shouted Warren. "I can't wait any longer."

At any other time Helen would have seen the humor of the scene that followed.

There were six burners on the stove, and as every one was covered with some utensil full of water, she and Maggie made each three trips to the tub. Warren, still in his bathrobe, looked on in gloomy silence.

"That's not going to be enough," he grumbled, when the last kettle was emptied and the tub was still hardly one-third full.

"But, dear, this would get cold before we could heat any more."

"Suppose I'll have to make it do then," slamming the bathroom door.

A sound of splashing, then Warren's voice in muttered oaths.

"What in thunder's the matter with this tub? The water won't stay in."

"Have you got that thing marked 'Waste' shut down tighter?" called Helen.

"Of course I have, but the blamed thing don't work."

And his profanity grew more emphatic, as what little water there was evidently ebbed out before he had half time to bathe.

Helen had heard Warren rave before about this "new-fangled" plumbing, which was always getting out of "whack" and which either did not keep the water in the tub or would not let it out. But he had never raved quite so violently as he did this morning when he came in to breakfast.

"If ever I build a house I'll put in bathtubs with a good old-fashioned hole at the bottom to let out the water and a rubber plug on a chain to keep it in. I'll dare any plumber to propose anything else. By thunder, I'll get a few things off my chest if he does! The whole plumbing business has gone nutty on 'improved' bathroom fixtures. Gad, they must stay awake at night trying to think of some new devilish contrivance to label 'Waste' or 'Out!' If you have a good rubber plug on a chain and a hole in the tub to put it in, you know what that's for—you don't have to label it."

Warren paused to get his breath and then went on more vehemently.

"They have the water squirting up from the bottom of the tub, and from out the side, and from heaven knows where—any place but out of two sane faucets at the end. All these 'modern' hotels and apartments have some new infernal way of getting the water in and out of the tub—and NONE of 'em ever work."

When Warren once got started on this subject there was no stopping him. By the time he finished his grapefruit, he had worked himself up to a savage mood.

Breakfast Late

Although they had been at least fifteen minutes late sitting down to the table, breakfast was still not ready.

"Couldn't get breakfast with all those pots on the stove," declared Maggie, who now brought in the toast and coffee in an unmistakably bad humor. "And you can't do things fast when there ain't no hot water."

For Helen the rest of the breakfast was most depressing. Warren had subsided from his violent tirade against "modern bathroom fixtures" to a glum silence, and Maggie slammed things down with no attempt to conceal her ill-humor.

All morning the discomfort of being without hot water was very trying. Every few moments Helen would forget and start to turn it on, either in the kitchen, pantry or bathroom, only to have the pipes hiss at her emptily.

At noon the hallboy rang up and warned them to be sure that all faucets were turned off, as they were now testing the pipes and the hot water might run any moment.

But evidently the test was not a success. The afternoon passed and still the hot water faucets only spluttered only a few dirty drops.

"Hot water on?" demanded Warren, the moment he came home.

"Not yet, dear, but I'm sure it will be before night. They've been testing the pipes."

"Well, if I can't get a bath here tonight I'll go where I can! Turkish bath'd be good for my cold, anyway."

Helen always had horror of Warren going to a Turkish bath. She had never been to one, but she had the vague and wholly erroneous idea so many women have, that they were frequented only by sporting people.

And now every little while she kept running into the bathroom, vainly hoping for hot water. She 'phoned down, and the janitor said they were doing all they could. The plumbers were still at work, and they expected to have the water on any moment.

"The devil they do!" growled Warren. "They've been saying that all day, haven't they? Well, I'm not going to take any chances. I'm going to have a bath tonight."

In spite of Helen's protests and pleadings to wait a little longer, Warren shrugged into his overcoat and was off.

Hardly had the elevator clanged after him, when Helen was again in the bathroom, now from sheer force of habit, forlornly trying the hot water faucet.

It Comes at Last

There was a sudden cheerful gurgle in the pipes and a thin stream of water spurted out! It was reddish-brown in color and icy cold, but as Helen waited breathlessly it grew clear and HOT!

Was it too late to catch Warren? Frantically she ran to the window. Under the street light she could see him half way up the block. She threw up the sash and called loudly. But the wind carried her voice the other way, and with a whirl of his cane he swung around the corner.

Helen put down the window with a fierce resentment at things in general. Why did they always happen just wrong? She had tried the water just before he started. Why could it not have run then, instead of a moment afterward?

Why did everything seem to contrive to operate always for her discomfort? Now she was left to a long evening alone, to worry about Warren and the unknown and "doubtful" associations of a Turkish bath.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

ACCEPT NO MAN

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am fifteen and deeply in love with two young men, one five years my senior and the other seven years my senior. Both think there is nothing like me. There was a young man from another place who came to see me some time ago. He proposed to me, but I didn't accept, as mother likes the other ones a little better. I don't know whether to accept or not, as I do not love him very much and would like you to give me some advice.

BELLE.

A GIRL of fifteen is too young to be courted. I am surprised that your mother permits it. You must refuse all three and permit yourself to be a care-free girl at least five years longer.

TRY THE SAME TIME

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been keeping company with a young man for two or three years. He writes to me occasionally, and sometimes he does not write for three weeks. Should I wait the same length of time before answering his letter or should I answer it in a few days? I love this young man and do not wish to let him know it by answering too soon.

BROWN EYES.

NEVER answer his letters sooner than he replies to yours, and I think it would be a good plan if you occasionally wait longer.

DON'T BE DISCOURAGED

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-three and kept company with a girl of twenty for seven months. I treated her well and, to the best of my knowledge, was well liked by this girl and her folks. I loved this girl and told her of my love and intentions a number of times. I asked her quite often if she loved me, but the only answer was: "I'll tell you some other time." Do you think this girl liked me very much? I quit calling without any excuse and she never wrote to me asking my reason for not coming. Did I do right, or should I give her another chance and make up with her?

M. F. K.

APPARENTLY the girl does not love you, but as long as there is a chance that she may change her mind you must not give her up.

Go to her and ask a decisive answer. You have been devoted to her for seven months, and that gives you a right to demand an end to your suspense. Perhaps absence has taught her to love you.

AILING WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Mrs. Hilbert Tells of Her Distressing Symptoms During Change of Life and How She Found Relief.

Fleetwood, Pa. — "During the Change of Life I was hardly able to be around at all. I always had a headache and I was so dizzy and nervous that I had no rest at night. The flashes of heat were so bad sometimes that I did not know what to do. "One day a friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it made me a strong, well woman. I am very thankful that I followed my friend's advice and I shall recommend it as long as I live. Before I took the Compound I was always sickly and now I have not had medicine from a doctor for years. You may publish my letter."—MRS. EDWARD B. HILBERT, Fleetwood, Pa.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried many women safely through this crisis.

Feet Tired-- So Tired?

TIZ Makes Sick Feet Well No Matter What Ails Them.

Send at Once for Free Trial Package

TIZ acts at once and makes tired, aching, swollen feet remarkably fresh and sore proof.

It's the sure remedy, you know, for everything that gets the matter with your feet. It's for sore feet, and for sweaty, bad-smelling feet, and for corns, callouses, and bunions, too.

"For years I have been troubled with sore and tender feet; suffered intense pains. Have had the assistance of physicians without relief. I bought a box of TIZ, which worked a perfect cure, as it has with a great many of my friends. I would not be without it."—A. F. Dreutzer, Chicago.

TIZ is not a powder. Powders and other foot remedies clog up the pores. TIZ draws out all poisonous exudations which bring on soreness of the feet, and it is the only remedy that does.

You'll never limp again or draw up your face in pain, and you'll forget about your corns, bunions and callouses. You'll feel like a new person. There are two kinds of people in the world—those that get what they want, and those that get what someone else wants to give them. Be firm—when you ask for TIZ, get it and laugh at the substitute.

TIZ is for sale at all drug stores, department and general stores at 25 cents per box, or it will be sent you direct, if you wish. Money back if TIZ doesn't do all we say. For a free trial package write today to Walter Luther Dodge & Co., Chicago, Ill.

Praise This Remedy For Lung Trouble

If the voluntarily written words of grateful people, living in all parts of the country, praising Eckman's Alterative, a remedy for the treatment of coughs, colds, throat and lung troubles, are to be believed, this medicine is certainly doing a vast amount of good for such sufferers. This is a sample taken from many:

St. Mary's Academy, O'Neill, Nebraska.

"Gentlemen: About seven years ago I was attacked with Tuberculosis. I coughed unceasingly, could not sleep nor eat, even could not speak out loud and could do no work. I had three hemorrhages, raised blood most of the time and suffered with night sweats, fever and chills. A specialist of Columbus, Ohio, pronounced my case hopeless.

"Nearly five years ago I heard of your Alterative and procured some at once, with the result that I soon found myself restored to health. I consider your medicine, if faithfully taken, a most excellent remedy. Mother Superior permits this testimonial."

(Signed) SISTER MARIE.
Sisters of St. Francis.

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious in cases of severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all Riker-Jaynes Drug Stores, Houghton & Dutton Drug Dept. and other leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

PROGRESS SEEN IN DISCONTENT, SAYS FORBES

By B. C. FORBES.

Business Editor of the American.

Discontent, ferments, class clashes have invariably attended great forward movements. Reforms are not born of complacency of meek resignation, of sudden dourness. They are the fruit of well directed strife, struggle and achievement, of confidence in the justice of a cause, of irrepressible determination to assert manhood, of faith in that eternal justice which suffuses the scheme of things.

Only the dead are still, it has been remarked. The American people on this reasoning are very much alive, for stillness was never more conspicuous by its absence than it is today.

Let not employers imagine, however, that they alone are dissatisfied, that they alone are finding life not carpeted with roses, that they alone want changes.

Do you know any one class that is not crying out?

Let us glance around us.

Even Politicians Hit.

Take politics first. The "Old Guard" have been routed and the younger race of politicians find the people clamoring for a greater share of power and insisting that intrenched bosses be shorn of their privileges. Moreover, the professional politician finds he no longer occupies a pedestal. He is no longer looked upn with reverence. A man's credit does not now rise 100 per cent. if he be seen walking down Fifth avenue with Chauncey M. Depew or his senatorial successors. The politicians have lost their halos and the veterans regard the times as out of joint. Upstart legislators, too, find they have a hard time and are not exuberantly happy.

What of the wealthy? For years they were looked up to, honored and held in awe. The government let them act as fancy suggested, the courts curbed not their business operations, the tax gatherer did not trouble them. All that has been changed. The government has probed high finance and big business. Few multi millionaires have escaped being dragged before legal or legislative tribunals, and now the Federal tax collector is to visit them clothed with power to filch a goodly percentage of their incomes.

Troubles of the Rich.

The cost of living too has fallen heavily upon those dependent upon income from permanent investments, for the returns on securities purchased years ago are not commensurate with current prices of commodities. And these are only a few of the troubles that have befallen the poor wealthy class in these days of applied democracy.

Railroads, the greatest employers of labor and the largest spenders in the country are almost ready to throw up their hands in despair, so fast and furiously are their woes multiplying. More than one railroad manager is ready to hand over the job of running the railroads to the government.

Our greatest manufacturing industry is steel. Here also lamentations are loud. Mr. Schwab now denies that he said he would quit if the tariff were cut, but that is exactly how steel men have been talking. They have had visions of a foreign invasion of an armada laden with steel rails, beams, shapes and machinery. The world, they wail, is not going well with them and especially as the public are insisting upon the abolition of seven day working weeks, long daily hours and liberal compensation in case of injury.

Employers everywhere are complaining of the arrogance of organized workers, of advancing wages and shorter hours.

In short, every class is kicking vigorously, each, as it thinks with very special reason. Nowhere is life flowing along like a song.

TODAYS STOCK MARKET

Stock markets were dull today and hesitancy prevailed in those in this country as well as abroad. Trading was professional and while there was a disposition to be cautious, sentiment remained bearish. Price changes as a rule were narrow and represented what the military call "making time."

Locally there was little doing. At the opening Boston & Maine was up a point. It receded half of one during the first hour. New Haven was a trifle higher. Osceola advanced a point, but there was not much business or change in coppers as a class.

New York was irregular. Uncertainty was the chief characteristic of that market. The foreign exchange market was easier there and "indications pointed to the engagement of $2,000,000 more for shipment to Paris on Saturday."

New York Irregular at Start.

Prices were irregular when the New York market opened and the tone was rather heavy. Shorts did not manifest much disposition to cover and there was no demand for stocks from the outside. Further talk about the probability of B. R. T. directors raising the dividend rate at their next meeting sent that issue up a point in early trading.

Southern Pacific was ½ lower at the outset, but made a partial recovery later. New York Central, which broke through par yesterday for the second time since 1908, opened at 100¼ for a loss of ⅛.

American Can showed a slight gain on dividend prospects. New Haven made a slight fractional gain. Among losses were U. S. Rubber common ¼, Steel common ⅛, Union Pacific ½, C. & O. ⅛, and Amalgamated ⅛.

The curb was quiet.

Americans in London were colorless.

Bank's Rate Not Reduced.

People who hoped that the Bank of England would reduce its minimum discount rate today were disappointed. It remains unchanged at 4½ per cent. Expectation that the rate might be cut to 4 per cent. was fostered by low private discount rate. Transactions in London as low as 3⅝ per cent. were reported yesterday.

The bank made a fairly favorable statement. The proportion of its reserve to liabilities is now 49.90 per cent., against 49.20 last week, and compares with an advance from 49.90 to 51¼ per cent. in the corresponding week last year.

London Copper Quotations.

The London copper warrants market opened dull, as there was a disinclination to do much business until the copper producers' report, scheduled for today, was made public. Spot opened 2s. 6d. lower and the decline in futures was 1s. 3d.

The three largest producers are still asking 15¾ cents a pound for the metal, but smaller concerns have made sales, it is said, at 15⅝ or as low as 15½. No important sales are reported very recently. It is understood that copper sold of late for exportation has been disposed of lower than 15⅝ cents a pound.

Want Rate Case Reopened.

On Monday the Interstate Commerce Commission will be asked to reopen the Eastern rate case by roads in that territory, who want permission to advance charges 5 per cent. President Daniel Willard of the Baltimore & Ohio says his road will not spend any more money while existing conditions prevail and that he understands the New York Central and Pennsylvania will take the same stand in regard to improvements. He said:

"The Baltimore & Ohio, the Pennsylvania, the New York Central, and many other Eastern roads are all in the same class regarding the need for higher rates.

"The Baltimore & Ohio can keep on paying 6 per cent. dividends on the present basis of rate, but if we do, maintenance of our improvements will suffer."

Cheaper Meat Coming.

It is believed in London that great quantities of Argentine beef in cold storage there will be transhipped to New York and distributed in the Eastern part of the United States as soon as the tariff on meat is removed.

For some time the Beef Trust has been rapidly acquiring control of the cattle and sheep industry of the Argentine Republic by purchasing dock properties and erecting huge cold storage plants at two or three of the principal seaports of Argentina and Brazil. Coincident with their activities in South America, the meat barons have been quietly adding to the capacity of their already large cold storage plants and docking facilities at Jersey City and Hoboken.

So long as the tariff of two cents a pound was kept on meat, the Beef Trust made no move to bring any of its products from South America to this market, although it has been doing thriving business in Europe from its South American plants.

Financial News in Brief.

The report of the United States Steel Corporation as to the unfilled tonnage on its books at the end of April will be published on Saturday next. It is expected that, compared with March figures, there was a decrease of about 200,000 tons.

American Beet Sugar earnings for the fiscal year ending with March, after providing for preferred dividends, are estimated at $575,000. The sum does not allow for depreciation, however, and is equal to only 3.5 per cent. on the $15,000,000 common stock.

United States Steel preferred stock is held by about 74,000 people and the common by 44,000.

In April British exports increased $50,827,000. It is firmly believed in London that the foreign trade of England will tremendously increase as soon as the Underwood tariff goes into effect.

Rail making is a branch of the steel trade which continues brisk, although there has been a decline in most others. Most rail mills are booked ahead for several months.

The Bank of France's weekly statement will show an increase of 61,371,000 francs in gold and 5,995,000 in silver.

The New York sub-treasury gained $3,212,000 from banks yesterday and has gained $6,356,000 since Friday.

The Boston News Bureau estimates dividend, interest and principal disbursements in June, payable in Boston at $11,659,502, or $3,212,002 more than in the same month last year.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

Probably no mechanical innovation in automobiles during the present year has attracted so much attention as the front wheel brakes that are used on the Isotta-Franschini racing car to be driven by Harry Grant, twice winner of the Vanderbilt Cup, at Indianapolis on Memorial Day.

Grant approaches this feature with much expectancy. He believes that as a matter of safety alone it will add much to the car and that in the matter of tires it will take a great deal off the rear wheels and help equalize the strain.

Grant says front wheel brakes should prove helpful and prevent skidding.

BAR SMOKING IN LONDON THEATRES

LONDON, May 8.—Arthur Wing Pinero's proposal to allow smoking in the London theatres was emphatically rejected by the Society of West End Theatre Managers.

STILL FRIENDS, BRADY'S FORMER FIANCEE SAYS

Alice Lorraine Daly, the post graduate student at the Emerson School of Oratory, who broke her engagement with Senator H. Brady of Idaho, because she preferred an histrionic career, today declared there is not the slightest ill feeling between herself and the Western statesman.

"Recently," she said, "we mutually decided to break the engagement and the announcement of its termination was made by my parents at St. Paul. It was realized that it was better we abandon the idea of marriage."

Miss Daly was surprised at the statement from Washington that Senator Brady had denied there was or ever had been an engagement. She said:

After my graduation from the Emerson School of Oratory four years ago, I became head of the department of oratory and public speaking in the schools of Pocatello, Idaho, the home of Senator Brady, who was then Governor.

He visited my class one day, and we became acquainted. After that he visited my home at Gray Cloud island, near St. Paul and we saw a great deal of each other. A little more than a year ago our engagement became informally known. There was so much publicity about it. Too much. He was a very busy man.

Because of the publicity and varying stories, we decided that we would not formally announce the engagement, but would be content by not denying it. In this way, of course, it was generally known among our friends that we were engaged.

There is not the slightest bit of ill-feeling between us. Senator Brady is a man of high ideals and great conscience. He has done and is doing great work for Idaho. He was, you remember, the originator of the special which carried the Western Governors on a trip to the East. He is president of the Trans-Mississippi conference, and I am sure he will do good work for the entire country.

I intend to continue my studies. I am completing a year of post-graduate work at the Emerson School this week and intend to continue studying. My work interests me intensely, but until I am through with my studies I cannot say definitely what my plans will be.

Miss Daly is taking a prominent part in commencement week exercises at the school.

HUMAN SOUL LIKE A REPUBLIC, SAYS COLLEGE PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, May 8.—Rev. Eugene McConnell, president of Gonzaga College, in an address following the dedication of a new college building here by Cardinal Gibbons, said:

"The human soul is like a republic. The legislative power is the intellect, the judicial power is the conscience and the executive power is the will. Each of these in the soul of a child demands training."

H. N. SLATER SUED FOR SUM OF $25,000

Horatio N. Slater, son of Mrs. Helen Hunt Slater of Webster, is sued by Norah A. and William J. Cummings of Boston as the outcome of the collision of Cummings' and Slater's automobiles on the Nahant road, April 19.

MRS. PARKER LAUDS MODESTY OF SUFFRAGISTS

Again the suffragists and their supporters come to the front in their defense of the appearance of the marchers in the New York pageant, decried by Mrs. A. J. George of Boston as an "appeal to sex" and not to logic.

At a tea given at the New England Women's Club for the Boston Equal Suffrage Association, Mrs. Helen Schlesinger Parker, daughter of the late Barthold Schlesinger, of Brookline, declared the parade "a wonderful, moving spectacle," while Dr. Samuel McComb, assistant minister of the Emanuel Church, Newbury street, declared that the modesty and "thoughtful appearance" of the marchers was extremely impressive.

Said Mrs. Parker:

I marched in the New York parade, and it was a wonderful moving spectacle of dignified, earnest women. In the opinion of some of my friends who had not been in favor of suffrage it was the most stirring spectacle they had ever seen since they watched the troops coming back from the war.

Dr. McComb said:

The modesty and dignity of the women in that parade greatly impressed thoughtful minds. It seems very difficult to please the anti-suffragists, for the great objection made some years ago was that the suffragists were freaks, dowdies and horrors. Now they are too graceful and charming for the eye masculine to pass unbiased judgment upon.

CLIP COUPON FOR CYCLOPEDIA SET AT ONCE!

If you have not clipped the cyclopedia coupon printed daily in the AMERICAN you had better do so at once, for the distribution opens again tomorrow and everyone who presents one coupon and $1.98 at any of the distributing points will get a complete set of this wonderful work, which usually sells for $12.

This is the greatest book bargain on record and thousands of our readers have already taken advantage of it.

Ask any of those who got it what they think of it and they will tell you that it is the most useful set of books they possess. Benefit by the experience of others and get your set tomorrow.

Everybody's Cyclopedia is bound in beautiful silk cloth, stamped in gold, and contains all the subjects treated by the expensive and cumbersome sets, but all condensed into ready reference form, so that the desired subject can be found in an instant.

The price of this set complete is $1.98 on the AMERICAN'S coupon plan. Mail orders will be filled on the same terms, but, as the sets are too bulky to be sent by mail, express charges are to be paid by the receiver.

Clip the cyclopedia coupon from today's issue and present it at any of the distributing points tomorrow.

AT THE

HENRY F. MILLER

PIANO-WAREROOMS

395 Boylston Street

In addition to our own HENRY F. MILLER PIANOS we are selling

NEW PIANOS OF OTHER MAKES

AT

$175, $185, $190, $200, $210, $225, $235, $250, $275, $285

THESE PIANOS AND THESE PRICES are creating a sensation in the piano trade of Boston, because they are identically the same makes of pianos that many dealers elsewhere are asking from $275 to $425 for.

WE ARE PERFECTLY FAMILIAR with the extensively advertised "sales" carefully designed to sell cheap pianos at "fat" prices to unsuspecting buyers. It is within our definite knowledge that practically every such "sale" masquerading under the guise of "Piano Clubs," "Piano Puzzle Contests," "Piano Guessing Contests," "Piano Introduction Sales," has been a deliberate attempt to unload on the public a grade of piano which, while represented to be worth $350 or $400, was not so good a piano in any sense as we offer at $185.

WE WANT TO DO ALL WE CAN to protect the public against misrepresentation of piano values, and to that end are offering various makes of desirable pianos at from $175 to $285 which we guarantee are not excelled in value at the prices asked in any piano store anywhere in the United States.

WE PARTICULARLY INVITE the modest buyer—the buyer with only a small sum to invest—to visit our warerooms and look over our pianos and the prices tagged thereon. Don't sit at home and be "canvassed." Look always to the integrity and established reliability of those with whom you trade. Consider quality first and price afterward.

The Inauguration of Secret Trials Would Be the Beginning of an Orgy of Injustice

The Directors of the National City Bank of Cambridge Are No More Entitled to the Advantage of Secret Proceedings Than Any Other Guilty or Innocent Men Charged with Dereliction.

The failure of the National City Bank of Cambridge, through the peculations of George W. Coleman, caused a large number of depositors and stockholders to lose money.

The United States government, through Ex-Governor John L. Bates, the receiver of that bank, accuses its directors of RESPONSIBILITY for Coleman's conduct and is seeking by judicial proceedings to make these directors RECOUP THE DEPOSITORS for the losses which they have sustained.

It is not claimed that there is any special reason why the evidence now being presented to support the government's charge that the directors of this National Bank in Cambridge are responsible for the losses incurred through Coleman's dishonesty SHOULD BE HEARD IN SECRET.

The reason is sufficiently obvious why the directors themselves do not want this evidence to be made public. It is natural that they should wish a concealment of testimony which might have a tendency to impugn the care which they OUGHT TO HAVE TAKEN of money intrusted to their care, or the business capacity which they held themselves out as possessing when they undertook to handle other people's money, or the honesty which is required in all positions of trust.

The AMERICAN does not blame these gentlemen, under the circumstances, for wishing the evidence which the government is presenting against them to be taken in secret. But these gentlemen stand in NO DIFFERENT POSITION from that of ANY OTHER DEFENDANT in a civil or criminal suit. They are no more entitled to the advantage of secret proceedings than is any other guilty or innocent man charged with dereliction, whether criminal or civil.

In at least one-half the trials in this Commonwealth one party or the other has more reason for asking for secrecy than have these directors. In nearly every divorce trial one party or the other is innocent. But BOTH must submit to the humiliation of testimony which hurts their feelings and crushes their pride, without respect for their innocence or their fault. In the criminal courts there is scarcely a day that men are not on trial charged with disgraceful crimes, of which "twelve men good and true" find them innocent. But innocent though they be, they nevertheless are obliged to STAND PUBLIC TRIAL.

Why? Because, since the beginning of English jurisprudence, it has been found that the advantages of public trials outweigh the hardships which they entail. The inauguration of secret trials would be the beginning of an orgy of injustice. The least reflection will show any man that this is true. Wealth and power, in such cases, would not only be immune from punishment for their own transgressions, but would find means of terrorizing innocent people whom they dislike by oppressive conspiracies against them in secret trials.

Public trials are often wholesome even to those against whom the government has failed to show a reasonable preponderance of the evidence. A man may not be LEGALLY guilty of misconduct and it may thus be necessary to acquit him in court. But his MORAL fault may be great enough to condemn him in public opinion and in this way he may receive a deserved punishment, which will be a lesson to him and a warning to others.

These are some of the reasons which led our forefathers to require that court proceedings should be public. They knew that the light tends to kill knavery just as light tends to kill disease germs.

WHO THEN are these directors, that they should have a PRIVILEGE DENIED TO OTHERS?

We wonder if Judge Harris appreciates the public evil which flows from the feeling that there is inequality before the law in this Commonwealth? Mr. Harris has been a judge on our Superior bench. He was not a bad judge. He has been in Congress. He has felt the force of public disapproval. He knows the changing public feeling towards the omniscience of our courts. Has he considered how much his present attitude in this case may affect public opinion towards them? Are the feelings of these directors so important to him that they affect his sound judgment?

Our Message to the English Suffragists

The reason why the American suffragists are winning steadily, rapidly, peacefully State after State and votes by hundreds of thousands, and why the English suffragists appear to be losing rather than gaining, is usually explained by the difference in American and English methods.

The American women are demonstrating in reasonableness and self-control their fitness for suffrage.

The English women are demonstrating by violence and lawlessness their unfitness for suffrage.

This is a commonly expressed opinion. It is not fair to the English woman.

Conditions in England are different. In England suffrage in its extreme is often called, even by militant leaders, a "sex war." The feeling behind this is intense. In England woman has bitter cause of complaint against existing laws. The English woman's especial cause of complaint is against the English divorce law, under whose laxity one man may have practically a dozen wives without the right of divorce for the wife; as Sir Conan Doyle put it, "Any urbane scoundrel can maintain several establishments, and so long as he does not throw his wife downstairs she cannot divorce him."

But, whatever the difference in condition and provocation, it is clear that the method of American women is the best if not the only way to win.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox Says

Waste and Penuriousness Are Equally Sinful.

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1913, by the Star Company.

IT is a great thing for the reformer and the altruist to use common sense and logic in his ideals. Next to faith, they are the most valuable qualities for any human being to possess. Extravagance and wastefulness are sins; so are stinginess and parsimony. The woman who wears expensive gowns only once, and devotes her whole energies to the purchase of new costumes, sins against her best self and good taste. The woman who wears old and cheap clothing when she can afford to procure new garments sins against good taste and good sense.

There Is Much That Needs Righting in This World

There was a man of fortune who was so economical that he trundled his invalid wife about in a wheelbarrow to save the expense of a carriage when the physician recommended a daily drive. He believed equipages were wicked extravagances. He committed a greater sin than the man who sports three motor cars, if the money which purchased them came honestly and he uses them for the benefit and pleasure of others as well as himself.

There is much that needs righting in the world today, much that is being righted, and great changes are imminent. Never were so many intelligent and capable people working together in their various ways to better humanity as now, and never was the condition of the working masses so hopeful. Read any reliable history—Tom Watson's History of France, for instance—if you want to rejoice that you live in this age and not in any other past era. Never since the spiritual man took on material form and began to evolve back to the spiritual has there been such hope for struggling souls as now. Bad as the worst conditions of the laborer are, they are better than were many of the best conditions for thousands of years.

Humanity is coming into the consciousness of its own divine power to change and alter any system which is oppressive. Give it faith in itself and in the overruling God of Justice, and leave sorrowing hearts with their faith—in worlds beyond—where love shall find its own. These worlds exist.

But while we live in this body let us try to look on the sane side of every question, on all sides, and avoid becoming warped in judgment, or fanatical or incapable of holding a just and fair opinion on any subject of the day.

Opinions Differ as to the Demands of Nature

Many people who are clamoring for the Simple Life, and who are condemning every phase of luxury, fail to realize that all luxury is comparative, and that to the native Indians of America the simplest houses and clothing would seem luxuries, and a bathtub and a swimming tank inexcusable extravagances.

Back to Nature is a popular phrase, but there is a dividing line in each mind between the possible and impossible limit of that journey backward.

One man may insist that the proper boundary lies in sleeping out of doors, another on an outer balcony, and still another may be quite satisfied with a good sleeping room well ventilated. Yet the Indian would consider all of these conditions far from Nature. Only by rolling himself in his blanket on the earth could he feel he was back to Nature.

One woman may feel she is dressing simply if she wears a shirtwaist and plain skirt, and another may feel she is equally simple in her attire if she wears an artistic creation made by a good dressmaker who lives by her trade. But the squaw would consider the garments of both superfluous, since blankets were cheaper and simpler to adjust.

Since Nature adorns its animals and birds and fish and insects in such beautiful attire, and in such splendid colors, it would seem that man was not presumptuous or vain, if he believed he had the right to provide himself with attractive apparel.

Man has been given the mental power to obtain whatever he wishes. He was born naked, but even the most fanatical reformer can not say that he believes he was intended by Nature, or Nature's God, to remain naked.

And if he is to be clothed, surely it is his privilege to decide upon the style and coloring of his garments.

And it should be his pleasure and aim to make himself as agreeable to the eye as God has made the lesser animals.

The world in which we live is opulent.

There are trillions of precious gems in our rocks and seas; our fields are fertile; our industries are unlimited: and better still, and more important, MAN'S POWERS OF ACHIEVEMENT ARE UNLIMITED. HE CAN DO AND HAVE, AND BE, WHATEVER HE WISHES, IF HE WILL RECOGNIZE HIS OWN POSSIBILITIES.

And no Powers or Principalities or Monopolies can stop him or hinder his progress if he determines to go ahead.

Therefore let each one of us think largely, live wisely, work justly, and win worthily.

And let us not limit our achievements by narrow ideals or parsimonious rules of life.

TRAGEDY and the MOVIES

By MALCOLM DOUGLAS

"I WAS with Booth, the mighty,
But Booth, alas, is dead!
So now I am with the movies,"
The old tragedian said.

"In Chambersburg and Pottstown,
And likewise Kokomo,
You can view me classic features
At 5 and 10 a throw.

"I was with Booth, the mighty,
But Booth has long been dust,
So I get me cakes and coffee
From the moving-picture trust.

"Shakespeare, thou wast me idol,
But thee I hadst to can;
Me, oh, Bard, for the movies;
Me for the camera-man!"
